

Water 'geyser' detected on moon

HOUSTON (UPI) — Water clouds have been detected erupting like geysers through cracks on the lunar surface — a discovery that could lead to a permanent U.S. manned moon base, a Rice University scientist said Friday.

It was the first time water has been discovered on the moon, which long has been thought by scientists to be a dry, barren sphere.

The vapor was discovered by two instruments called "suprathermal ion detectors" which were left on the lunar surface by the astronauts aboard the Apollo 12 and 14 missions.

The scientist, Dr. John W. Freeman Jr., 36, said the instruments detected a "moon geyser" last March 7 which lasted about 14 hours. He said the cloud — 99 per cent water vapor — spread to cover an area of more than 10 square miles near the Apollo instruments on the eastern edge of the moon's ocean of storms.

"This indicates there is possibly liquid water in the subsurface of the moon," Freeman said. "In my opinion this represents a potential benefit and we could tap this source of heat, energy and water if the day comes when the Congress and NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration) see fit to establish a permanent lunar base."

Freeman, an assistant professor of space science at Rice, and his associate, Dr. H. Kent Hills, 33, a space science researcher, told a news conference the

"geyser" that let the vapor escape seven months ago coincided with a series of small moon quakes recorded on seismic instruments also left behind by the Apollo astronauts.

"The moon is not a completely dead and inactive place," Freeman said. "It still is actively quaking and still actively venting gas." He said there might be pockets of water under the lunar surface, as there are oil wells under the surface of the earth.

Hills said their instruments showed that the vapor was 99 per cent water, but that it was so diffused there would not have been a quart of liquid water if it had been converted from gas.

"But that is only from the small portion of the vapor we saw," said Hills, a native of Mount Pleasant, Iowa. "Since we don't know what fraction we were looking at, we don't know how much water there was."

Freeman and Hill, both of whom received their doctorates in physics from the University of Iowa, could not explain why none of the lunar rocks returned by astronauts contained evidence of water.

"If someone landed on the Sahara Desert the first time they came to earth they would have a hard time finding water, too," Freeman said. "But that doesn't mean there isn't any water on earth. There aren't any geysers in the Sahara but there are on earth."

U.S. crime fighter quits in scandal

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Will R. Wilson, the chief enforcer of federal criminal laws, resigned Friday night, saying he seeks to spare embarrassment to the Nixon administration because of his association with an admitted Texas stock manipulator.

Hills ties to the Texas figure, Frank W. Sharp, a Houston developer and former law client, have already provoked Democratic criticism of the administration.

Wilson has asserted that his ties to Sharp were entirely innocent. But, he said in a four-page letter of resignation to the President:

"Political enemies of the past, misplaced confidence, and forces whose faces I do not recognize have assailed my character." Recent events, he continued, "through no fault of mine, created difficulties and embarrassment which your administration should not be taxed with."

FURTHER, he said in the letter, he can no longer

WILL R. WILSON
'Character Assassination'

tolerate "the character assassination which is currently being used as a political tactic . . . I must fight my own fight freed from the restraints of this office."

Wilson, 60, has served as assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division since the Nixon administration took office.

As a Democrat, he served as attorney general of Texas, but later changed his party affiliation to Republican.

The criticism raised against him all relates to Sharp, who has pleaded guilty to two felonies, selling unregistered securities and making false entries in a bank ledger.

He also has been charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission with "systematically looting" at least three banks and insurance companies.

SHARP WAS given a suspended sentence and placed on probation. A Justice Department spokesman said he had been granted immunity from prosecution because he had promised to tell all he knew to a federal grand jury and because the two charges to which he pleaded guilty were the only ones that the Justice Department could prove.

A number of Democratic political figures in Texas have been implicated with him and three officials have been indicted by Texas grand juries.

Wilson has been criticized for accepting a $30,000 interest-free loan from Sharp while he was assistant attorney general and while the SEC was investigating Sharp.

Wilson, supported by the White House, acknowledged the loan, but said he did not know of the investigation until long after it was made.

ANOTHER charge was that Wilson bought stock through his own account for a federal bank examiner who was checking a bank owned by Sharp.

Wilson conceded that he bought the stock, but did so ignorant of the fact that the man was a bank examiner and because Sharp told him the man did not have a broker.

Wilson also has acknowledged that he received about $297,100 in loans from Sharp between 1964 to 1968, before his appointment to the Justice Department. A Justice Department spokesman described these loans as entirely proper and said that Wilson had paid interest on them ranging from 4.5 to 9 per cent.

He's Now Mr. Medina

Former U.S. Army Capt. Ernest Medina, 35, who was acquitted of any responsibility in the My Lai massacre, holds up his honorable discharge from the Army following his release from the service at Fort McPherson, Ga. Grinning broadly, Medina told newsmen he had "no regrets" about resigning after 16 years of service, and said he would be at his new job in Michigan Monday morning. He disclosed his position with the helicopter company owned primarily by his defense attorney F. Lee Bailey. "I'll be assistant to the chairman of the board, who is Mr. Bailey."

High IRS official Phase 2 watchdog named

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Edward Preston, assistant commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service for administration, has been selected to be the top enforcement officer for phase 2 of the Nixon economic program.

Preston, a career federal employee, will head the newly created Service and Compliance Administration, according to an administration official, with a staff of about 3,000 persons. He will monitor the program, investigate complaints, and provide information to the public.

The Service and Compliance Administration will be staffed largely by IRS employees, but will report to the Cost of Living Council. Its initial job is to establish a national system of regional and local centers to support the administration of phase 2.

Guidelines for the administration will be set by a pay board and price commission, whose members are expected to be announced within a few days. Preston, 52, has been an IRS employee since 1950, and is in charge of the service's personnel, training, fiscal and facilities management, and public information functions.

During phase 1 of the economic program he served as liaison with the Office of Emergency Preparedness.

Top officials of the IRS have been holding a series of meetings regarding the new enforcement agency. Early next week, at the annual meeting of its top officials from around the country, plans for the administration will be discussed and explained.

Earlier Friday, President Nixon issued an executive order formally establishing most of the machinery that will exercise, for an indefinite period of time, broad controls over the nation's economy.

As Nixon had forecast in his speech to the nation on Oct. 7, the executive order extended the life of the present Cost of Living Council, which will have

First L.B. cargo moves

By JACK O. BALDWIN

Longshoremen Friday night unloaded cargo at Long Beach and Los Angeles harbors for the first time since shutting down West Coast ports 107 days ago.

Twenty-six work gangs reported to dock duty Friday night, and 1,200 are expected at 8 a.m. today, the start of an overtime pay day.

Their return to work came on the heels of the federal government winning its bid to halt the ILWU for contempt for alleged defiance of the Oct.

International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union for the full 80 days under the Taft-Hartley Act.

At San Francisco, U.S. District Judge William T. Sweigert said he would sign the order Monday. The judge had extended a temporary back-to-work order which was due to expire tonight until the government drafts a preliminary injunction.

Sweigert put over until next Thursday a government request to cite the ILWU for contempt for alleged defiance of the Oct.

6 temporary restraining order by dock workers at the Ports of Long Beach, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle.

The Long Beach-Los Angeles longshoremen voted Thursday to go back to work after ILWU president Harry Bridges addressed a meeting of 2,300 dock workers in Wilmington.

The ILWU at those two ports and Oakland had refused to go back to work in a dispute over the use of "steady men" by the shipping operators, who are members of the Pacific Maritime Association.

The return to work at the local harbors was not without problems.

A hiring hall dispatcher for the ILWU said the availability of work gangs would be far short of demand for several weeks.

Cargo-handling gangs — averaging eight men for each ship's hold — will be assigned to inbound vessels on a priority basis. Ships that have been in port the longest will get first call on unloading crews.

Inbound ships are to be handled ahead of outbound vessels.

U.S. wins textile import fight

WASHINGTON — President Nixon fulfilled a three-year-old pledge to the American textile industry Friday when the White House announced agreements curbing noncotton textile imports from Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong.

At the same time it was announced the United States is lifting the 10 per cent surcharge imposed on noncotton textile imports from all countries including the European economic community, which is not under restraint.

The long-sought agreements were hailed by the textile industry and members of Congress from textile producing states.

John E. Reeves, president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute and chairman of Reeves Brothers, Inc., said the White House announcement "demonstrates the President's deep concern for the well-being of the millions of people involved in the country's fiber-textile-apparel producing complex."

"It also indicates international recognition on the part of the exporting nations of the need for moderation in their exports to U.S. markets," he said.

Political overtones of the Nixon pledge led Japan to resist the export restraint measure on the grounds that it was not an economic but a political move by the Nixon administration.

The White House in successive negotiations denied this, however, and said that the U.S. deficit in textile trade this year would amount to $2.15 billion, a sharp increase from the deficit of $1.54 billion last year. Also the imbalance in imports over textile exports formed the largest single contribution to the overall U.S. trade deficit of more than $9 billion.

Peter Peterson, the President's advisor on foreign economic affairs, told newsmen that the voluntary agreements that had been negotiated under the threat of mandatory controls avoided protectionist measures that would have resulted in permanent trade walls being built to protect American industry.

Peterson acknowledged that restraints on the flow of textiles might result in higher prices, but said they would help to save jobs in the textile industry. He estimated that a total of 250,000 jobs would have been lost by the end of next year if no restraints were applied. Thus far, he said 100,000 jobs have been lost.

Kennedy, Bayh rap Nixon's court list

WASHINGTON — Two liberal Senate Democrats Friday attacked President Nixon's way of going about filling Supreme Court vacancies, with one calling it an insult to the court.

A list of six possibilities has been referred to the American Bar Association for checking on qualifications for the two court vacancies.

"Surely the compilation and submission of this list will rank as one of the great insults to the Supreme Court in its history," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., criticized the six under consideration and also what he called Nixon's floating of trial balloons prior to submitting nominations to the Senate.

"The President apparently will not announce his nominee until he sees which balloons rise to the top and which ones burst," Bayh said in a statement.

Commented Sen. Kennedy: "No American who respects the Supreme Court and its role in our system of government can be silent in the face of the list of six potential justices submitted by President Nixon to the American Bar Association this week."

The ABA panel looking into potential nominees for the two vacancies plans to meet next Wednesday amid indications that the working list will be expanded and final choice by the White House may be delayed.

At the moment, qualified sources confirmed that Herschel H. Friday, a Little Rock, Ark., bond lawyer, and Judge Mildred Lillie of Los Angeles are in the lead.

More names may be added in the next few days to the list of six undergoing field investigation by the ABA, and there are reports of dissatisfaction with the group generally.

Harvard economist wins Nobel prize

Combined News Services

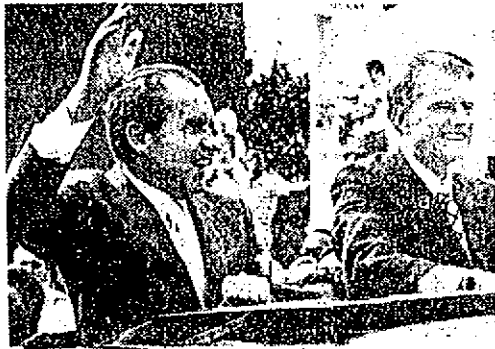

After retired college professor Simon Smith Kuznets was named a winner of the Nobel Economics Prize Friday, he held a brief, low-key news conference that his associates indicated was typical of him.

"He is a very quiet man, a scholarly man," said Prof. Henry Rosovsky, chairman of Harvard University's department of economics.

"He isn't given to going around making speeches, or public appearances. He's a scholar's scholar," said Rosovsky, who introduced Kuznets at the Cambridge, Mass., news conference.

Kuznets, 70, sometimes called the "father of GNP," answered questions in a low voice with a trace of an accent from his native Russia.

Earlier Friday, after the

Billy Graham has his day

President and Mrs. Richard M. Nixon came to evangelist Billy Graham's hometown Friday to join thousands in paying tribute to the internationally famous preacher during Charlotte's Billy Graham Day. The ceremony at the packed 12,000-seat Charlotte N.C. Coliseum was not unlike the many evangelistic revivals Graham has addressed throughout the world since he began preaching to mass audiences in 1947.

The President hailed Graham as "the top preacher in the world" and "one of the greatest leaders of our time."

Graham, who was born on a dairy farm near Charlotte Nov. 7, 1918, is a long-time friend of the Nixon family.

Later, the President and Mrs. Nixon went to Camp David, Md., where they planned to spend the weekend.

In a row that an American had received the economics prize, and the second day in a row that an American had won a Nobel prize, Paul Samuelson of Massachusetts Institute of Technology won the 1970 economics prize, and Dr. Earl W. Sutherland Jr. of Vanderbilt University won the medicine prize Thursday.

Dead at 130

A one-time slave who helped bury the dead during the Civil War's siege of Vicksburg and figured his age at 130 died in a Columbia, Miss., hospital Friday.

He was Sylvester Magee, a slender black man who said he was born in North Carolina May 26, 1841, but spent most of his life in Mississippi. He said he took his surname from Hugh Magee who bought him and took him to Covington County, Miss., to work on a plantation.

Magee married three times. He made his home in Columbia with a daughter, Mrs. Nathaniel Conerly, and her husband.

P.G. Wodehouse, creator of Jeeves and other comic characters, celebrated his 80th birthday at his Riverhead, N.Y., home Friday like one of the English squires who people his novels. There was a party for friends and neighbors — but no celebrities.

He left the festive gathering early in order to be well rested for what he hopes will be the final game of the World Series Saturday. Wodehouse, a cricketer himself, became a baseball fan when he arrived here from England in 1904 and this season is cheering on the Pittsburgh Pirates.

4,650 GIs pulling out

Combined News Services

SAIGON — The U.S. Command Friday announced the second biggest one-day troop withdrawal since President Nixon's pullout program began, reducing American combat forces in Vietnam to 20 battalions from a high of 112 in July, 1969. U.S. spokesmen said a total of 4,650 GIs were ordered to stop combat operations and prepare to leave the country. This reduces U.S. troop strength in Vietnam to 205,350 from a high point of 543,400 in July, 1969. Under Nixon's withdrawal program, U.S. strength in Vietnam will be cut to 184,000 by Dec. 1.

Twelve black U.S. soldiers were jailed for about a week at Cam Ranh Bay on mutiny charges after they barricaded themselves in a bunker at an isolated base called Whiskey Mountain, three of the GIs involved said Friday. The Army has dropped the mutiny charges against the 12 who, in effect, pleaded guilty to lesser charges. Two other men were still in the stockade as a result of the incident Sept. 25 but the Army would not say what they were charged with.

South Vietnamese spokesmen, meantime, reported continued heavy fighting around the Cambodian plantation town of Krok and in northern Tay Ninh Province, an area the Communists once called "War Zone C."

Salyut returned

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union has returned the orbiting Salyut space laboratory to earth after almost six months of flight and pronounced its mission completed. Robbers brutally kill 2

FREMONT, Ind. — Police in three states Friday were searching for robbers who abducted a woman bank cashier, forced her to accompany them on a nighttime raid of the bank and then shot her and her ailing husband to death with a shotgun in their home. The killers fled with more than $20,000 in loot in the couple's gold-colored luxury automobile. The getaway car was found abandoned late Friday in high weeds in a clump of abandoned farm buildings about seven miles northwest of this northeast Indiana lake resort village. The trussed bodies of Mrs. Esther Ferguson, a cashier and teller at the First National Bank of Fremont for 30 years, and her husband, Everett, the town clerk and treasurer, were found mutilated by shotgun charges fired at close range in the basement of their modest home. Both were about 55.

Coal talks deadlocked

WASHINGTON — The scheduled resumption of coal contract talks were postponed over the weekend Friday amid reports that the miners and operators were deadlocked and ready to ask federal mediation help. Meanwhile the nation's railroads claimed they are losing more than $3.6 million a day in revenues as a result of the two-week-old strike of East and Gulf Coast dock workers and softcoal miners.

Soviet sea strength

BRUSSELS — The Soviet Union leads the world in numbers of submarines, fishing vessels, oceanographic ships and the new marine architects who will design the ships of the future, according to information in the hands of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The information was made available Friday in the form of 11 pages of notes on the Soviet navy. The source was not given. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union said that a major program of urban expansion was under way in Severodvinsk, a northern city that was recently identified as a nuclear submarine center in a Washington dispatch on a reported build-up of Soviet strategic weapons.

Theory on Red China

BRIGHTON, England — British authorities have come up with a theory suggesting that ex-President Liu Shao Chi died in a bid to reach Russia aboard a hijacked plane. Senior political informants, here for the annual convention of the ruling Conservative party, said it was based on diplomatic and intelligence reports from several points and on information exchanged with friendly governments. The report also speculates Marshal Lin Biao, who nominally is defense minister and designated successor to Chairman Mao Tse-Tung, is dead.

Men: beware of wolves in sheep's clothing when you buy your next suit, sportcoat, or slacks!

About 35 years ago an enterprising young man named Ed opened a men's clothing store in Wilmington, California.

He named it Ed's For Style.

Today, Ed's For Style has created a unique policy in all his stores for selling suits, sportcoats, and slacks in Southern California. The policy is simple. And highly successful. You cannot pay more than 49 dollars for a suit, 29 dollars for a sportcoat, or 12.99 for a pair of slacks.

But you can pay less! As low as 19.99 for a suit or sportcoat and 4.99 for slacks.

And that means top quality garments. It means all-wool or silk and wool — as well as double knits. It means the most modern styles. And it means the full range of sizes from the smallest to the biggest.

But recently there has been a rash of copycatting breaking out in the business. Other stores trying to ride on Ed's coattails and trying to act like they are Ed in TV commercials and newspaper ads — but not delivering the same low prices and high quality that Ed does. Honestly!

Well don't let them pull the wool over your eyes. There is only one Ed's For Style. The Original Ed's For Style. You won't find Ed's unique price and quality policy anywhere else.

So, don't be confused or misled. Just come to Ed's For Style. You're losing money if you don't.

$80,000 in illegal tuna impounded

A San Diego fishing vessel operator may lose $80,000 earned from the sale of allegedly illegal catch of nearly 200 tons of fresh yellowfin tuna seized by federal agents at Terminal Island Friday.

Star-Kist Foods, Inc., has agreed to buy the quickly perishable fish, but the money won't go to William Magellan, manager-owner of the motor vessel Trinidad, until the outcome of a civil suit.

THE SUIT, filed by the U.S. attorney's office, charged that Magellan violated a federal law regulating off-season commercial tuna fishing.

Federal agents seized the catch at the Star-Kist cannery, where it was unloaded Wednesday.

Proceeds of the sale — which Star-Kist officials estimate at about $80,000 — will be held by the U.S. marshal's office, pending outcome of the lawsuit.

Larry L. Dier, assistant U.S. attorney in charge of the case, said the catch was from the San Diego based fishing vessel Trinidad.

He said the vessel had been spotted operating 575 miles inside a regulated fishing area in the eastern tropical Pacific during an air sweep by the Coast Guard and the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Dier said that every year the government sets a limit on yellowfin tuna that can be legally taken during a declared "open season."

Apollo 15 crew hopes to get another shot at space

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Voicing readiness to do it all over again, the Apollo 15 astronaut crew returned to North American Rockwell's Space Division in Downey Friday for the first time since their spectacular moon-landing venture last August.

Following a tumultuous, confetti-throwing reception by more than 2,000 of the workers who built their spacecraft, Crew Commander Dave Scott noted that his team has been named as backup crew for Apollo 17, last of the scheduled lunar landing missions.

"We hope this will give us another flight," Scott said. "It also means we'll come back to see you from time to time."

Al Worden, the command module pilot who spent the entire trip aloft while his companions descended to the moon's surface, said he'd "like to relive the whole experience again."

"I'd like to go again just for the takeoff," said Jim

Irwin, the lunar module pilot. "That initial lift was the greatest thrill of my life."

Scott, whose fingers still bear bruises from his televised tussle with a balky lunar soil drill, and his teammates signed their names in a wet concrete plaque for Space Division President Joseph McNamara following the ceremonies.

"The trouble with the core drill design was that we didn't have enough advance information on the lunar sub-surface," Irwin explained. "The flutes didn't expel residue from the sides of the hole."

Although this prevented Scott from drilling to the full 10-foot depth as planned, samples of lunar soil were taken from below the eight-foot level.

"From these layers we have discovered clues to more than 50 chapters of solar system history," Scott pointed out. "We can catalog them very accurately over millions of years because of radioactive isotopes created by the action of sunlight on the surface of the moon."

At a news conference before the astronauts departed for another ceremony at the North American Rockwell Seal Beach facility, the Apollo 15 crew urged continuation of space programs in order to capitalize on gains already realized.

"Some of our priorities have been reordered because of other needs, but we must press on with the Skylab orbiting workshop and space shuttle programs," Scott stated.

"We think the country has more than got its money's worth out of the space program," said Worden. "The approach for the future should be to maintain a steady level of effort."

Pedro fire believed to be arson

Arson investigators are probing the cause of a greater alarm fire which destroyed an old harbor landmark and threatened the San Pedro Hotel at Sixth and Beacon Streets early Friday.

Flames were roaring through the upper two floors of the three-story Bank of San Pedro when firemen arrived at 4:27 a.m. The blaze was brought under control in an hour after 14 engine companies were called to the scene by Division Commander Frank Brown.

OCCUPANTS of the Anchor Hotel at 112 W. Sixth St. were led safely from the building which was separated from the burning bank by a fire wall. The hotel was not damaged.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles Fire Department said the damage to the bank building was recorded as no loss because it had been condemned as part of the Beacon Street Urban Renewal Project.

Investigators suspect the fire was started by either an arsonist or skid row transients who may have broken into the building and set a small fire to keep warm during the night.

Jet noise law called too tough

Airlines serving California will be largely unable to meet noise standards established by the state's Department of Aeronautics, the president of National Airlines warned Friday.

Lewis "Bud" Maytag, whose airline will accept delivery of the first of a fleet of McDonnell Douglas DC-10s next month, said only aircraft of this category will be capable of meeting state noise regulations scheduled to become effective Dec. 1, with a possible delay of one year.

Speaking before the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco, Maytag said that "realistically, even if the deadline is extended for a year, there would be relatively few jets flying which can meet the new standards."

He identified these as the DC-10, Lockheed L-1011 and Boeing 747.

Maytag said manufacturers have yet to discover a practical answer to the problem of jet engine noise in earlier model aircraft.

"If most jets in service are banned from landing at California airports, cutbacks in schedules will be inevitable," the outspoken airline executive asserted. "Quiet will prevail but the airlines and related service industries will be forced to wind down their operations."

Maytag said there was a resolution calling for committees of the California Senate and Assembly to conduct joint investigations into the technical and economic feasibility of the state regulation of aircraft noise.

He disclosed that studies indicate it would cost up to $1,250,000 to modify one DC-8 or 707 to meet pending federal requirements.

Maytag observed that the federal government has not ordered jets to stop flying if they cannot meet requirements, "but California has said that."

DIAL 432-3451

ACTION LINE is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., Monday through Friday. Questions to be answered are selected for their general interest and helpfulness.

Good night, Irene!

CAN ACTION LINE help us find a woman named Irene Graves, who gave her last address as 1777 Cherry Avenue? After her husband died, Mrs. Graves left their dog, a white spitz named Queenie, to board with us for a while at Kennel Kare Ltd., 1354 Obispo Ave., 597-9587. Until recently, Mrs. Graves had been coming regularly to visit Queenie. She hasn't been by for the last two months and we don't want to send this lovely dog to the pound. If we can't find Mrs. Graves we would like to give the dog to someone who could give Queenie a home. H.A.B., Long Beach.

ACTION LINE was unable to locate the dog's owner and the manager of the motel at 1777 Cherry Avenue said no one named Irene Graves had lived there. Maybe some readers can help.

Book loan

I have a neighbor who is handicapped and recently has begun classes at Long Beach City College. However, she cannot afford to buy her books. Where might she be able to get some financial assistance? E.P., Long Beach.

Compromise is when two people get what neither wanted

Your neighbor should see Thomas Lyon at the Student Financial Aids Office in the west end of the Administration Building on the Long Beach City College campus, 4901 N. Carson St. The financial aids director told ACTION LINE that book loans of as much as $40 are available to students enrolled in seven units or more. The money is loaned on a 30-day, no interest basis. If a student cannot repay the amount borrowed in 30 days, the loan will be extended with a 5 per cent late payment charge. Lyon said that because of a shortage of money to loan and an increasing demand for loans, he has tried to limit book loans this semester to students who also attended summer session and had no time to earn money for school. However, Lyon said he will make exceptions. Emergency loans of as much as $100, on a 60-day, no interest basis also are available to students suffering financial crises, Lyon told ACTION LINE. He said these mostly are for veterans whose GI educational benefit checks have not arrived.

Shaver

Paul Harvey broadcasts a news program from Chicago which is aired in Los Angeles over KABC. On almost every program he praises the Schick Flexomatic Shaver and states that if for any reason a buyer doesn't like it he will refund the money himself. Because of his guarantee, I bought one of the shavers and found it was not satisfactory for my beard. In August, I wrote to Harvey in care of KABC, asking where to send the shaver for a refund. I got no answer. Can you help? C.B.C., Garden Grove.

You can return the shaver to James Badgett, president of Schick Electric Inc., at 2 Greenwich Plaza, Greenwich, Conn. 06830, and he will refund your money, said Joan Keenan, Harvey's secretary in Chicago. She suggested that if you haven't already tried to get a refund from the store where you bought it, you might do that first in order to save the time and postage involved in mailing it to Badgett.

Benefits

I have been unemployed for more than a year, and I still am a few years off from retirement. I always have earned good wages, but no one wants to hire a man my age. I have been told by friends that I should freeze my Social Security account now in case I'm unable to find a job before retirement age. My friends say that my Social Security benefits will be based on my last 10 years of employment before retirement age instead of my best 10 years. Is this true? E.F., Long Beach.

No. In the first place, your Social Security account cannot be frozen unless you become disabled. Second, the amount of benefits is not determined by the last 10 years before retirement. The amount is based on your average earnings over a period of years. The number of years used to determine benefits varies according to an applicant's date of birth and his date of retirement. The Social Security Administration automatically discounts five years in which a person earned his lowest wages. The local Social Security office can fill you in on details in your specific case.

Tourism lack blamed on state government

A-4-INDEPENDENT,
PRESS-TELEGRAM
Long Beach, Calif., Sat., Oct. 16, 1971

BURLINGAME (AP) — Tourism in California is in a nosedive and industry leaders blame state government, the California Chamber of Commerce said Friday.

Chamber studies show California has intercontinental competition in the race to attract tourist dollars "but we're still fooling around with outmoded concepts of mountains versus seashore, and north state versus south state," said Clay McGowan, chairman of the chamber's Travel and Recreation Committee.

California ranks at the bottom of the 50 states in state government expenditures to promote tourism, the chamber said in a news release. It said California spent $41,000 annually while the 50-state average was $691,000 a year and 13 states spend more than $1 million yearly to attract visitors.

An unnamed San Francisco hotel executive was quoted in a chamber news release as saying a sluggish economy was not to blame for tourism woes and "this business is sick and hurting beyond what we'll openly admit."

"When San Francisco

hotels grateful for one-third occupancy in the best month of the year and Disneyland hedges on attendance figures, someone better get busy on it or things are not going to improve, even when the economy does," the executive said.

"I don't know what interpretation he puts on 'hedging,'" a Disneyland spokesman said, adding the organization did not give out daily or monthly attendance figures but did issue them yearly.

Attendance for the fiscal year ended Oct. 1 has not been tabulated, but is expected to be from three to six per cent below the 10.2 million attendance figure for the previous fiscal year, the spokesman said.

A statewide steering committee and a chamber committee on legislation will present the Legislature and Gov. Reagan with a 10-year "master plan for tourism development," the chamber said.

McGowan said unless some sort of help is forthcoming from the state, "we just slowly lose a million jobs in California and a four billion dollar industry."

The chamber's Travel and Recreation Committee is made up of executives from airlines, amusement parks, auto travel groups, hotel and motel chains and travel agencies.

Senate gets teen 'Bill of Rights'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation was sent to the full Senate Friday to give persons aged 18, 19 and 20 full adult rights to marry, hold public office, change names and even carry guns — but not to drink liquor.

Assemblyman Paul Priolo's bill was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee for the second time. It had been returned from the Senate floor for amendments dealing with youths involved in crimes.

"This bill is absolutely punitive," said Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, one of two committee members to oppose the bill. "It says if you're going to vote, you're going to pay the price."

"Wait till you see the campaign to give 18-year-olds the right to drink," Moscone said after the vote, noting that advocates for a lower drinking age will argue the bill by Priolo, R-Pacific Palisades, would give youths near total adult status anyway.

"We're trying to make adults out of these young people before they're ready," said Sen. Clark Bradley, R-San Jose. "The 18-year-olds aren't asking for this bill."

$1-billion coast protection plan

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Reagan administration released a long-range plan for preservation of California's scenic 1,072-mile coastline so future generations can "look out to the horizon and feel the ocean's spell consume them."

The 123-page plan produced by the State Department of Parks and Recreation recommends that the state purchase 300,000 acres of land and 236 miles of shoreline to preserve its scenic and recreational value. The cost would be about $1 billion.

IT RECOMMENDS a coordinated effort by local, regional, state and national bodies in "assuring that California's magnificent coastline remains ecologically sound, esthetically attractive and recreationally productive."

Natural preserves covering 324,000 acres of coast land are recommended to keep the areas in their natural state by banning all development except foot trails.

To preserve historically significant areas in the coastal zone, the report recommends addition of more than two dozen sites to the state park system representing the Indian era, the Spanish era and the American era.

The summary of the comprehensive survey says it "documents competing uses of the coastline and decries uncontrolled development of this valuable resource which is in the state and national interest. Time has come for this insensitivity to cease."

CALIFORNIANS must act to protect the coastal resources and "provide the opportunity for the future generations to stand on the edge of the continental United States, look out to the horizon and feel the ocean's spell consume them as it did the first explorers, early California residents and some of the present visitors fortunate enough to find unspoiled segments of the coast."

It says "ultimately each citizen should have access, both physically and visually, to all publicly owned coastline."

The report estimates current cost of acquisition, protection and development of the recommended coastal area would be more than $1 billion.

The cost could be shared by the federal government and other western states, the report says, as West Coast parks are used by people of many states.

Other methods of financing suggested would be use of part of the gasoline tax revenue for areas adjacent to highways and setting up parts of the Pacific Coast Highway as toll roads with revenue earmarked for scenic vistas, access-ways and rest areas. Development of beaches used primarily by residents of a metropolitan area could be financed by a region-wide tax, it says.

THE REPORT says the state's historic interest in the ocean "has been fragmented and infrequent," with special interests regulated on a hit-or-miss basis as they profit from oil wells and fishing.

"The use of the shoreline is presently proceeding in a random, often uncontrolled fashion, not always in the interest of the people," the report summary says.

"The major question is, can the majestic coast's characteristics be retained and still meet all of the future needs of all the people if we proceed in the present manner? The answer is no."

Solons vote to open rap sheets to public

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A person would be allowed to inspect his own criminal records and ask that any errors be corrected under legislation which cleared the Assembly unanimously Friday.

The bill by Sen. Howard Way, R-Exeter, would let a person fill out an application — with fingerprints — with local law officers who could charge a "reasonable fee" for the service.

Turning in that form with another fee of up to $10, he could come to Sacramento and inspect his records at the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

If he claims any errors, the law agency which furnished the questioned material must check it out within 30 days and make any necessary changes in state and local files.

The 540 vote sent the bill back to the Senate for approval of minor amendments before going to the governor's desk.

Demos reject Reagan tax plan

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A "quick and painless" $470-million stopgap tax program backed by Gov. Reagan was offered in the Legislature Friday and immediately rejected by Assembly Democrats.

The plan proposed by Republican Assemblyman William Bagley of San Rafael would wipe out the 336-million deficit in the budget and meet the state's impending cash crisis.

It also would raise 200 million for new schools, and coastline conservation and increase property tax relief for California's elderly homeowners.

BUT it would put off until next year an effort to achieve major tax relief — in the billion dollar range.

Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti of Van Nuys countered saying he will push the Democrats' $1.2 billion tax reform and tax relief plan in the Assembly next week.

It will incorporate all the compromises reached with Reagan during 17 days of negotiations that broke off in anger and frustration a week ago, Moretti said.

"This will cut back the taxes or at least break even for about 90 to 95 per cent of the people of the state," Moretti said. "I just don't think you can do better than that."

Bagley was flanked by Controller Houston Flournoy and Chief Deputy Director Ken Hall of the State Finance Department when he announced his so-called "mini" tax plan which calls for a boost of half a per cent in the state's business taxes, a new 11 per cent income tax bracket, a cut in the depletion allowance tax break for oil producers and a minimum income tax.

THERE also would be an increase of three cents in the state cigarette tax, now 10 cents a pack, and a start of payroll withholding of state income taxes.

Bagley called it a way to "a quick and painless solution to the problems caused by the past economic downturn."

Without some sort of budget-balancing program, Bagley said, the state will run out of cash to pay its bills and will have to issue $200-million worth of "scrip" in December.

He referred to Flournoy's statement that he would have to resort to depression-era tax warrants in December if no new source of revenue is approved immediately.

"This move has the full support of Gov. Reagan who has been in continuing communication with us" while he travels in the Far East, Bagley said.

But Moretti said even if the Democrats' major tax reform program fails, they will not accept the Bagley plan as a means of balancing the budget.

"That budget will be balanced through withholding and closing loopholes" said Moretti, referring to payroll deductions of the state personal income tax and tightening up on allowances for such items as oil well exploration and non-taxable investments and depreciation.

Solon thanks Reagan for vetoing bill of his SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Republican assemblyman Friday praised Gov. Reagan for vetoing an "unnecessary" bill which the assemblyman co-authored.

Referring to a bill which would have allowed teachers to provide general disease instruction without prior written approval from parents, Assemblyman E. Richard Barnes said "I agree with the governor's action" in killing the measure. Barnes said the bill, which he sponsored with Assemblywoman March Fong, D-Oakland, was faulty because it "did not establish a VD instruction program or provide course guidelines or contents."

Barnes did not say why he joined in sponsoring the bill. Mrs. Fong has announced she will fight to override the governor's veto of the bill.

What the heck's a blem?

A blem is a cosmetic defect on a tire. A pimple on the whitewall. Or a slight imperfection in the brand name letters on the tire. A blem is also a tire that we can give you a very good deal on. For example, these Uniroyal Fasttrack blem's. They're fully guaranteed by the manufacturer and us. These are twin whitewall, tubeless, glass belted tires with a 20,000 mile mileage guarantee. If you look real close, you might be able to find the tiny imperfection in each. Then we'll show you the big bucks you save ignoring it.

How come we're giving good stuff away free?

'Cause we want your business. We'll stack our prices, people, and service up against anyone else in the business. But how do we get you to believe us? Maybe we can tempt you to buy your tires here. Look, we're after customers who own two or more cars. If we can get you to buy tires for one car, you'll come back. In fact, we figure we'll have you for life. So cut out the coupon and take advantage of us just because you're in the market for a set of new tires anyway.

Murphy campaign expense statement beats out deadline

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Former Sen. George Murphy and a score of other losing political candidates Friday beat a midnight deadline and filed campaign financial disclosures with Secretary of State Edmund Brown Jr.

A spokesman said Murphy's lawyers delivered a Superior Court order to Brown's office in Los Angeles allowing him to have his personal financial statement officially restored.

The statement showed he raised no money and spent none in the 1970 general election which he lost to Democrat John Tunney. Murphy's campaign was run by a committee which previously filed an acceptable report.

The former Republican lawmaker earlier sent a financial statement to Brown but the secretary of state refused to accept it because a required court order did not accompany it.

Under California laws, if a candidate for state and congressional office fails to file his income and expenditure reports within 35 days of the election, he must obtain a special court order allowing him to submit a late report.

Brown last month identified 134 candidates who he said did not file reports properly and gave them one month to do so, until Friday midnight. He threatened legal action if they failed to comply.

Tom Quinn, deputy secretary of state, reported that at least 91 losing candidates had filed last-minute reports, including 75 Thursday.

Supervisors blast no-strike switch

From Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisors Friday lashed the decision of the Los Angeles County Employees Association (LACEA) to end its "no strike" pledge, terming the move a "slap in the face" and a "backward step."

The board members' reaction came in the wake of an overwhelming vote by the LACEA membership Thursday night to delete the "no strike" pledge from the association's Articles of Incorporation.

LACEA officials said only 500 members attended the meeting but the final count, including absentee ballots, was 3,387 in favor and 159 against. The full tally represented less than 15 per cent of the association's 39,000 membership.

Supervisor Frank Bonelli said the vote was "very regrettable" especially since it came at a time when the county was considering "the many concerns of its employees."

"NO one eating out of the public trough should bite the hand that feeds him," Bonelli said.

Supervisor Ernest Debs said he believes it is "morally and legally wrong" for public employees to have the right to strike and expressed the hope the legislature would push for a state law banning such a move.

Democrat urges unity on nominees

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Assembly majority floor leader Walter Karabian, D-Monterey Park, Friday urged Democrats to reach a post-convention consensus on party nominees for a 1972 presidential victory "because we can't wait for the next generation to strike down economic and discriminatory barriers."

Karabian substituted for Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, as speaker at the Third Friday Forum in Lakewood Country Club. Gravel, a substitute for Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Indiana, who has withdrawn his possible presidential candidacy, also canceled his appearance because of a schedule conflict.

Quoting former President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Karabian explained pre-convention dissent among Democrats in contrast to the more serene Republican route, ascribing it to the fact that "there are many ways to move forward but only one way to stand still."

In defense of debate against President Nixon's economic policies, he said, "There is no national policy or national law that says we must all fall in step on an economic policy that gives the short end of the stick to workers."

Karabian also attacked the "audacity and gall" of Nixon for "an endless line of Supreme Court nominees whose racial prejudice and bigotry are as deep as any in the nation."

About 200 persons attended the luncheon meeting.

U.S. aid to Southland hit as bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary J. D. Hodgson was accused Friday of discrimination in allocating $58 million in emergency job funds to Southern California.

The charge of unfair allocation of the money was made by nine Democratic congressmen from Northern California.

Led by Rep. John J. McFall, they said in a letter to Hodgson he had ignored his own guidelines in allocating all the money to the San Diego and Riverside-San Bernardino areas and to Los Angeles County and Orange County.

Other parts of the state have "equally bad unemployment and welfare pictures" and they added the Fresno and Stockton areas in Northern California "to participate fairly."

As announced last week by the Labor Department, $17.2 million was allocated to create public service jobs in San Diego and $12.8 million for the Riverside-San Bernardino area.

As first announced, the remaining $20 million of California's share of a total nationwide allocation of $115 million was to go to Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

This later was retracted and the department said the allocation of the $20 million was still under negotiation with state officials. However, department officials said Los Angeles and Orange County would still probably get the federal aid.

In protesting the allocation, the nine congressmen also sent a telegram to Gov. Reagan asking him to recommend to Hodgson that other areas be substituted for Los Angeles and Orange County.

Joining McFall in the protest were Democratic Reps. B. F. Sisk, Robert L. Leggett, Ronald V. Dellums, John E. Moss, Harold T. Johnson, Jerome R. Waldie and George P. Miller.

Health official denies he charged 'news management'

From Our L.A. Bureau

Public Health Commissioner Marvin E. Tischer said Friday he did not make any charges that the county's chief administrative officer was "managing" the news.

If his call for revocation of that (the CAO) department's "press gag rule" was taken to mean managing the news, then it was "an unfortunate choice of term," Tischer said.

TINCHER, commission vice chairman, said his main concern was to ensure that the health officer and other department heads were not restricted in releasing news of an emergency nature by having to get prior clearance from the CAO.

"If there was such an order (clearance through the CAO) in the past and it has now been changed — fine," said Tischer.

"If there was no such rule and the confusion about release of emergency news has been cleared up — also fine," he said.

Tischer said he stood by his letter to supervisors charging that a press release warning of a diphtheria case and the need for immunization was "substantially delayed in the chief administrative office."

THIS CHARGE was flatly denied by Chief Administrative Officer Arthur Will who said the release came into his office at 4:50 p.m. Friday, Sept. 24, and was given to the regular news media by 5:10 p.m. the same day.

Tischer however said Friday he learned the release was given to City News Service and to the Los Angeles Times "without any flag to point up its importance." He said because of this the material in the release was not "picked up by the media for one and a half days."

He admitted some of the "factual details" surrounding issuance of the release were "not in balance." But the commission nevertheless felt the release was not "effectively put into the hands of the news media," he said.

Though Tischer didn't spell out what he meant by the imbalance of factual details, it is believed he was referring to statements by various county officials that the release actually was held up in the health department.

Shoestring moviemaker

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Movies can be made on shoestrings if you're willing to be producer, performer, waitress, wardrobe master, makeup artist and money-raiser.

Rita Murray produced "House of Zodiak" for $15,000 doing all those things.

But it was necessary for the brunette young lady to raise another $25,000 to free the film from the laboratories.

Thereafter she joined forces with Paul Nobert and two silent partners to produce six additional feature pictures in 17 months. Not one of the films cost more than $400,000.

Productions Inc. (Moier is one of the not so silent partners) less than half have been released in the U.S. There is a reason for this, too.

"Zodiak" will be released in Europe first because it is more exploitable there," Miss Murray explained. "The two motorcycle pictures were released in this country because there is more excitement about them in the U.S. than abroad."

"Angels Die Hard" cost $116,000 and earned in excess of $2 million in the U.S.

This handy arithmetic could well be aped by the studios and better known producers. Nobert couldn't agree more. "We see motion pictures as a business like any other. There is always a profit and loss sheet to consider at the end of production."

"That's why we don't pay star salaries to actors who command more than our entire film costs."

It may also account for the fact that none of this outfit's pictures have been nominated for Academy Awards, or for that matter recognition at the Cannes Film Festival.

Profits, not awards, are what interest Meier-Murray Productions.

"We try to spend our money on key technical personnel," Miss Murray concluded. "We pay more for a cameraman than we do for a director."

"You can't have a small budget with a poor cinematographer and expect to get a worthwhile picture. So to us the cameraman is more important than the director."

With a title such as "Swamp Trash" who cares about the credits anyhow?

SOUTHLAND MOVIE GUIDE

As a guide to moviegoers this newspaper lists capsule contents of major motion pictures playing the Long Beach area. Most classifications represent the judgment of the Film Board of National Organizations.

McCABE AND MRS. MILLER — Warren Beatty gives masterful performance in Robert Altman's film about happy community of pioneers, prostitutes and Presbyterians in late 19th century Northwest. Also stars Julie Christie. (R)

THE LOVE MACHINE — Dyan Cannon in a lurid behind-the-scenes view of big time television and show business based on Jacqueline Susann's novel (R).

BOB & CAROL & TED & ALICE — The sharply satirical story of the marital hangups of two wealthy young Southland couples. Elliott Gould and Dyan Cannon are hilarious. (R)

ON ANY SUNDAY — A fast-moving, knowledgeable and sympathetic view of motorcycle riders. By Bruce Brown who made "The Endless Summer." (G)

GONE WITH THE WIND — The again-released classic of the Civil War era starring Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh and Olivia DeHavilland. Winner of 10 Oscars. (Before ratings.)

THE titles best illustrate the low budgets: "Angels Die Hard," "Bring Me an Angel" (both motorcycle epics), "The French Way," "Swamp Trash," "Runaway-Runaway" and "El Salvaje," a horse opera.

"We pick the scripts with definite audience in mind," Miss Murray said.

The temptation to ask what audience that might be was overwhelming.

"Our targets are the young people," Nobert explained. "That's why all our pictures are rated R or GP. We've never had an X-rated picture because it would wipe out our audience."

L.A. Philharmonic at UCLA

By DANIEL CARRAGA Music Critic

The Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra began its new season this week with a number of daytime appearances in secondary schools throughout the county. Tuesday night it commenced a three-week series of college campus concerts. Its four-event, 28th annual Long Beach season starts October 30. And the official, Music Center year begins November 4.

As is to be expected, innovations and personnel changes mark the beginning of this new season. The official roster of orchestral players shows some interesting switches and additions we will be commenting upon as the season continues. What surprises — outside repertory — the Executive Director has planned for us at the weekly Pavilion concerts remain to be seen.

But at least one fascinating new wrinkle was on display at the orchestra's third consecutive night performance this week, when it began a three-concert series at UCLA, Thursday.

That is the chance every individual audience has, on the night of performance, to choose the work or works it will hear after intermission. Ballots are handed out with programs, audience members mark one choice from a list of 23 works, the votes are counted, and the orchestra, without rehearsal (though all the offered works are standard enough to have been played recently), plays the majority choice.

sounded fine. Of course, this particular performance was not exactly without rehearsal, since the very same work had been chosen by Wednesday night's audience at Cal State, Fullerton. But, except for a single false start at the beginning, this reading went smoothly, it even came to include those ethnic accents so beloved in the third movement.

The pre-intermission was also worthwhile. It began with Bach's Fourth Suite, in D, very neatly played by the reduced Philharmonic. Before we could even gasp at the sight and use of a grand piano within the orchestra, conductor Samuel gave a short speech during which, with some logic, he explained that use. In any case, the sounds coming off the Royce Hall stage were stylish enough to justify any questionable visual details.

Daniel Kessler's 13-minute "Strata," a premiere, was the program's centerpiece. It is busy, but not chaotic; noisy, but not painfully so. And, as things turned out, it provided both tonic and contrast to the Bach and Mahler pieces.

AIP to release 26 films in '72

American International Pictures will release 26 new films in 1972, equaling its output this year and confirming the company's position among the traditional major film distributors.

Derivations from classic novels will head AIP's slate next year, according to board chairman Samuel Z. Arkoff and president James H. Nicholson.

Already completed is "Kidnapped," based on Robert Louis Stevenson's novel and starring Michael Caine, Trevor Howard and Jack Hawkins.

In the works are "Camille," based on the Alexandre Dumas book; Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The House of Seven Gables" and "Return to Wuthering Heights," the sequel to AIP's filmization of the Emily Bronte novel.

Also scheduled for release next year are "Dr. Phibes Rises Again," "Frogs," "The Hatfields and the McCoys," "Godzilla vs. the Smog Monster," and "Carry On Henry VIII."

Chevy flaw may jam accelerator wide open

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Transportation Department warned owners of most 1965-1969 model Chevrolets Friday to have their motor mounts checked for a possible failure that could jam the accelerator wide open and cause the loss of power steering and brakes.

The department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said it has received about 500 reports of engine mount failure that involved loss of vehicle control.

"There is evidence that many more such failures have occurred," the agency said, estimating that about 100,000 engine mounts have been replaced for all causes on 1965-69 Chevrolets.

Specifically involved in the special consumer protection bulletin issued by the department were all 1965-69 model Chevrolets, Novas, Chevelles and Camaros.

Engine mounts, two front and one rear, support the engine on the vehicle's frame and absorb noise and vibration, the agency said. Failure of the left front engine mount may result in partial rotation of the engine within the engine compartment during acceleration.

It said such failure in some cases may jam the accelerator and gear shift linkages and cause loss of power and braking and power steering assistance.

"The result is partial or total loss of vehicle control," the agency warned.

It said the failures occur when the engine mount — a "sandwich" composed of a layer of rubber between two layers of metal — comes apart allowing the upper and lower pieces to separate.

It said that if engine mount failure occurs while the vehicle is in use, the driver can control the vehicle by shifting into neutral, if possible, and turning off the ignition and braking.

The agency said the special bulletin reflects the preliminary results of an intensive investigation that is still in progress to determine if a safety-related defect exists. It said the purpose of the alert is to warn owners of the potential hazard and get further data for the investigation.

The agency issued the bulletin after investigators for Ralph Nader said that General Motors got its first reports of defective engine mounts on Chevrolets more than two years ago.

A source in the agency said that the government investigated the initial reports on the defect but found no reason to act. It said the investigation was reopened recently because of Nader's charges and a rise in the number of accidents reported to the agency.

Top aide backs nonphosphates

FDA adds to detergents confusion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acknowledging that consumers must be "totally confused by now," a Food and Drug Administration official disagreed Friday with the U.S. surgeon general's advice to use phosphate detergents.

"I would not have given the same advice," Malcolm W. Jensen, director of the FDA's Bureau of Product Safety, told the Senate subcommittee on the environment.

He referred to Surgeon General Jesse L. Steinfeld's news conference statement several weeks ago that he would advise housewives to use phosphate detergents because he said nonphosphate products are caustic and pose serious accident hazards especially to children.

Phosphates have been blamed for despoiling bodies of water because they promote the growth of algae which use up all the oxygen in the water.

Instead of turning away from nonphosphate detergents, Jensen said, educational programs about keeping products out of the hands of children should be intensified.

He said, in response to a question by Sen. William Spong, D-Va., that "we do not have the packaging technology that would make possible child-safe packaging."

However, he said this is being studied and some consideration is being given to requiring that automatic dishwashing detergents have child-proof containers.

Manufacturers of non-phosphate detergents also took issue with the surgeon general's Sept. 15 statement.

"Although there are differences in degree between individual products, the basic fact is that any heavy duty laundry detergent, phosphate or non-phosphate, will make the child ill who eats it," said Bernard A. Malin, chairman of the board of DeSoto, Inc., which manufactures "Triumph" and

U.S. investigating truth of Volvo advertising claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The manufacturer of Sweden's popular Volvo automobile disclosed Friday that the U.S. Federal Trade Commission has started a formal investigation of Volvo truth in advertising.

James C. LaMarre, Volvo of America vice president of marketing told a news conference that because of the probe, Volvo officials are unable to comment regarding charges of Ralph Nader's Center for Auto Safety that Volvo's U.S. national advertising campaign has been deceptive.

The center announced Sept. 3 it was asking the FTC to look into what it described as "monumentally misleading and deceptive" advertisements attempting to shield "the often unpleasant realities of Volvo ownership."

LaMarre and two other Volvo officials met in closed session with Lowell Dodge, director of the auto safety center, and with other consumer-group representatives regarding the center's lengthy letter of Sept. 3 to Volvo about complaints against the automobile and its servicing.

Dodge said following the meeting that the group learned from the Volvo officials for the first time that in response to various complaints, Volvo had extended the warranty period on certain automotive parts but had sent notice of this only to Volvo dealers, not to owners.

The extensions beyond the regular six-month warranty, some of them for as much as a year, were granted with regard to windows which have fallen out in some cars, brake pads, emergency brakes, and motors for windshield wipers, he said.

With the Volvo officials seated beside him at the news conference, Dodge said owners should have been notified of the warranty extensions because they may have gone to other repair stations for corrective work, unaware that they could get it free from Volvo dealers.

Dodge said the Center asked Volvo hereafter to provide it with copies of service bulletins to dealers, at least those involving extensions of the six-month warranty. The Volvo officials agreed to consider this request.

Dodge added that the

"Sears Phosphate-Free Detergents."

Stanley C. Trimble, vice president of Witco Chemical Corp., which manufactures detergents sold under a variety of brand names, said statements such as the surgeon general's would impede the search for safe nonphosphate products.

"The history of the detergent industry is one in which new products and new ingredients have often been developed by enterprising companies who were willing to try new avenues," he said.

"We fear the administration's Sept. 15 announcement can only have the effect of discouraging just that kind of activity."

National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is investigating complaints by Volvo owners regarding stuck accelerators.

One person at the news conference who identified himself as an unhappy Volvo owner said his accelerator twice became stuck in full open position.

IRANIAN CAVALRYMEN in gold and silver armor, dressed as ancient horsemen of the Sassanian empire of 1500 years ago, ride in formation as they pass the grandstand containing the heads of state from 50 countries during ceremonies in Persepolis Friday. Iran is celebrating the 2,500th anniversary of the Persian Empire.

Shah's show of shows revives splendor of ancient Persia

PERSEPOLIS, Iran (U) — In a spectacle outdoing Cecil B. DeMille, 25 centuries of Persian history passed in review Friday before the 50 heads of state camping out with the Shah of Iran in the ruins of the Temple of Darius.

Real kings and emperors, presidents and sultans sat in the desert sun under parasols watching a cavalcade of hooded and helmeted figures riding out of the past on Persian steeds and trained camels to the accompaniment of chanting choruses and thundering bands.

THE AFTERNOON sun, folding fantastic shadows across the crumbling columns and great stone staircase of the ruins, provided a dramatic stage set for the silver helmeted trumpeters on the ramparts.

Part opera, part parade, part historical drama, there may never have been a show before like it nor an audience to match.

Few horse command

chariots riding out of the days of Cyrus the Great were followed by hordes of Achaemenian archers with wicker shields, parthian cavalry brandishing swords, wheeled towers three stories high, Medes in golden armor, Mongols with drawn lances and Dailamite cavalymen in Cossack boots and fur hats.

One expected Charlton Heston to come galloping up in a two-horse chariot and swoop Her Serene Highness Princess Grace out of the royal bleachers.

TWO HELICOPTERS hovering a discreet distance over the ruins to discourage rural guerrillas from spoiling the Shah's extravaganza provided a real-life plot line for the widestage epic.

Security precautions were so tight for the climax of the Persepolis pageant that Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida complained he had to show his identification badge at every turning.

The downfall of the ancient Persian Empire was depicted with the arrival of three replicas of high-decked triremes, the multi-towered battleships that came to grief at the hands of the Greek Navy at the Battle of Salamis.

U.S. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, whose father was born in Greece, and the self-exiled King Constantine of Greece may have been the only ones in the house at that moment pulling for the Greeks. Agnew and Constantine had conferred earlier in the day in a surprise meeting.

After the historical pageantry, the Shah showed the might of the modern Pahlavi dynasty with wave after wave of goose-stepping troops.

IN THE grandstand, such seasoned parade-watchers as Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, President Nikolai V. Podgorny of the Soviet Union, Prince Philip of Great Britain and King Hussein of Jordan looked down benignly on the strutting Iranians.

The eight kings seated on blue chairs in the royal bleacher section might recall Christopher Marlowe, Shakespeare's contemporary, who wrote: "Is it not brave to be a king/And ride in triumph through Persepolis."

But the real triumph belonged to Shodja Aldin Shafa, Iran's imaginative director of celebrations, who only a few days before was said to have wearily issued a final edict to his staff:

"If this doesn't go off all right, I am going to shoot myself first and then all of you."

There was still no way of totting up the final bill for the Shah's splendiferous caviar klatch out in the desert and estimates range from $15 million to $400 million, including the many roads, airports, monuments and cast of several hundred thousand.

Bombs rip consulate, MIT bldg.

By The Associated Press

The Iranian Consulate in San Francisco was shattered by a dynamite explosion and in Cambridge, Mass., a bomb damaged a small portion of a building at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology overnight Friday.

No one was injured seriously in the blasts, which had no apparent connection.

Iranian Consul General Parviz Adle blamed radicals from his homeland for the explosion in San Francisco's exclusive Presidio Heights.

The explosion Thursday set off a gas-fed fire in the consulate. It coincided with the Shah of Iran's banquet in Persepolis, Iran, for world leaders, part of the 2,500th anniversary celebration of the founding of the Persian Empire.

Adle told newsmen "Iranian professional agitators" were responsible for the dynamiting, but he did not elaborate.

The explosion at the MIT's Center for International Studies was on the same floor as the office of Daniel Ellsberg, who has said he leaked the once-secret Pentagon Papers to the news media. The blast was at the opposite end of the hall and Ellsberg's office was not damaged.

Woman hurt as truck rams home

A cement truck plowed through three rooms of a $100,000 Palos Verdes Peninsula home Friday, causing $35,000 in damage and slightly injuring the owner.

The truck was enroute to a nearby construction site when it went out of control, according to the driver, Al Medeiros, 42, of 134 W. Redondo Beach Blvd., Gardena.

Police said the loaded truck crashed through the north side of the house at 30005 Avenida Esplendida. It destroyed antiques and Chinese-style furniture in the home owned by Mrs. Mary Wong.

She was in the kitchen when the accident occurred and was cut on the legs by flying debris, police said.

The driver of the truck was also treated for cuts and scratches on his arm.

Cleaver to return in urban guerrilla role

ALGIERS (U) — Self-exiled Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver said Friday he has decided to return soon to the United States and devote himself to urban guerrilla struggle.

In an interview in his villa on the heights overlooking Algiers, the 36-year-old revolutionary spoke bitterly of Communist Chinese moves apparently aimed at better relations with the United States.

He indicated that his disillusionment with Red China helped to convince him that "oppressed people" in the United States and other countries had no recourse except armed struggle by their own means.

He said he sent his wife Kathleen and their two children — Eldridge Jr., born in Algeria in 1963, and a girl born in North Korea last year — back to the United States earlier this week.

They were scheduled to arrive Friday in California, where Mrs. Cleaver intended to leave the children with Cleaver's mother in Altadena and then join in the guerrilla struggle, he said.

BOSTON (U) — Mrs. Eldridge Cleaver arrived in Boston Friday night and told newsmen that one of two women friends she was traveling with was being detained by the FBI here for air piracy.

"I am planning to follow them," he added.

"It was a bit of self-indulgence to spend these past two years here with my son," Cleaver said. He and Mrs. Cleaver have lived here since 1969 with an Algerian government subsidy, which they used to set up the Black Panthers' "intercommunal headquarters."

Cleaver is the author of "Soul on Ice," a book on his imprisonment in the United States and his political theories.

Following his split with Panther leaders Huey P. Newton and Bobby Seale, who remained in the United States, Cleaver renamed his section of the movement the Revolutionary People's Communications Network.

Cleaver expressed full confidence that he would escape arrest once he was inside the United States. "There are many people underground involved in violent political action and they can't catch them," he said.

ELDRIDGE CLEAVER
To Go Underground in U.S.

He declined to say how he would return, or on what travel documents he would leave Algeria. The U.S. diplomatic mission in Algiers has denied his request for a new American passport on the grounds that he is a fugitive from justice in California. He fled in 1968 after his parole was revoked following a shootout with police in Oakland.

Cleaver said his heart "is quite clearly in the United States" and he prolonged his Algerian exile only because of "the problems involved in running around the United States openly."

Asked when he planned to leave, he said with a smile: "I don't think it's wise to talk about when." But he left no doubt that it would be soon.

He denied that he was assuming the leadership of an underground revolutionary struggle in the United States.

U.S. poll shows many feel freeze favors big business

WASHINGTON (U) — An official government poll showed Friday the nation is sharply divided on whether the wage-price freeze is equally fair to everyone, with more than one-third responding that the freeze benefits a particular group.

The poll, conducted by the Census Bureau for the Cost of Living Council, showed that 40.8 per cent felt the freeze is equally fair to all groups while 37.8 per cent felt it isn't. The other 21.7 per cent gave a "don't know" response to the question.

Of those who thought the freeze is unfair, an overwhelming majority said big business and wealthy people are benefitting from it. The actual percentage was 82.1 per cent.

Government officials have contended the freeze has won the overwhelming support of the people.

The survey, conducted at a cost of $75,000, covered 2,500 households nationally. The Census Bureau was asked to conduct the poll because it said the time was short and the survey had to be done quickly.

The survey was delivered to the Cost of Living Council a week ago. A council spokesman said it was requested for "management purposes."

Of those surveyed, 30 per cent said they did not know anything the government had done since the middle of August to keep down the cost of living.

Of those who did know of government efforts to halt inflation, a large majority knew the government froze wages and prices but less than a third knew the freeze applied to rent.

PHASE 2 ENFORCER NAMED

(Continued from Page A-1) general supervisory powers over phase 2; created a seven-member price commission to stabilize prices, and a 15-member pay board to restrain wages and salaries; and established several subsidiary councils on interest rates and dividends, the wages of state and local government employees, and price and wage problems in the health services industry.

The order also provided for an executive director of the Cost of Living Council. The position will be filled by Donald Rumsfeld, counselor to the President, who will become in effect the council's chief executive officer and main public spokesman on wage and price policies.

The White House did not, however, release Friday the request for legislative authority Nixon will need to control wages and prices beyond the April 30 expiration date of the current Economic Stabilization Act of 1970; nor did it disclose the names of those who will serve on the various wage and price councils.

Rumsfeld, at a briefing at the White House said that both the legislation and the names would be forthcoming next week.

There have been private reports that the true reason for the delay has been a private struggle over the composition of the pay board, particularly the identity of its five public members, who will have the deciding votes in many wage cases. The board will also include five members from business and an equal number from labor.

In addition, neither the executive order, nor two other brief documents released by the White House, did much to clarify the relationship between the cost of living council and the various boards beneath it — a relationship which has been much debated here in recent days and which has been a major sore point with labor.

The essence of the debate has been whether the general supervisory and review responsibilities of the Cost of Living Council, an all-government group chaired by Secretary of the Treasury John Connally, implied a specific authority to veto wage rulings made by the pay board.

The labor unions have wanted at least this much autonomy for the pay board, and announced early this week that they have been satisfied on this point by a memorandum initiated by Nixon.

District of Columbia.

Both Kennedy and Bayh said the President could surely find distinguished nominees from the bench or the bar who would bring credit to the Supreme Court.

"If the President is to give us a laundry list of candidates," Bayh said, "it should at least be a list of stature, a list of quality."

As for Judge Lillie, Bayh said some lawyers in California had telephoned him and "given rather sad testimony about her sensitivity to the whole area of human rights."

DEMOS RAP NIXON ON COURT

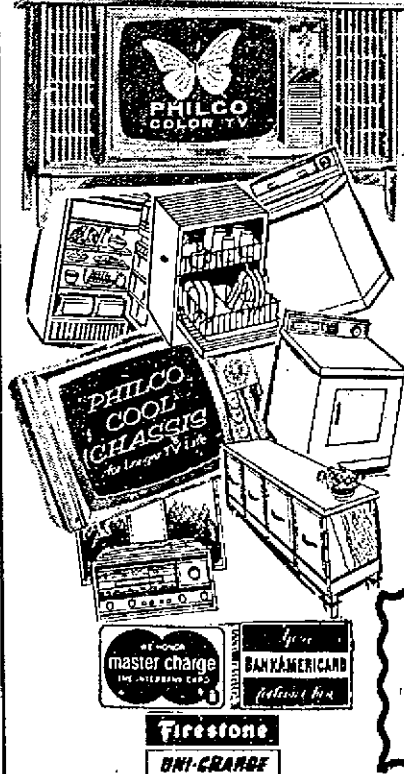

(Continued from Page A-1) ment that Nixon has revealed himself "as a radical in the true sense of the word, as a man who seeks to undermine one of the basic and vital institutions of our nation — the Supreme Court as an equal partner of government under the Constitution and as the ultimate guardian of our fundamental rights as free people."

He added that the list lays bare "the appalling nature of the administration's selection process, and it cannot stand the light of day."

With the prospect of new candidates being forwarded by the Justice Department it now appears unlikely that President Nixon can meet his deadline. He had said he would announce by next week his choices to succeed Hugo L. Black and John M. Harlan.

A sign that Friday and Judge Lillie are ahead is the fact that they are under more intensive investigation outside their home bases than are the four others: Judges Paul H. Robney and Charles Clark of the Federal Appeals Court in New Orleans, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., and Judge Sylvia Bacon of the

First three places

L.B. lifeguards sweep annual National Dory Championship

Six Long Beach lifeguards were commended Friday by City Manager John R. Mansell for scoring a clean sweep of the first three places in the annual National Dory Championships.

It marked the first time that any lifeguard group has won the top three places in the annual California competition, which is based on 19 races during the year in the 20-foot, open rowboats.

First place was won by the team of Lt. Pat Flynn and Gary Drent. Scott Hagee and Bruce Lemmon were second, and Rich Hoss and Hank Powell were third.

"This competition, which is on a volunteer basis and during their off-duty hours, not only brings recognition to the City of Long Beach, but also increases the skills and physical stamina of the lifeguards for the better protection of the public," Mansell said.

Included in the 19 races was one from Catalina Island to Long Beach Marina, a distance of 28 miles, and one from Port Hueneme to Anacapa Island and back, a distance of 25 miles. Other races are three or four miles long, and through the surf.

The two-man dories are made of fiberglass, and have a minimum weight requirement of 300 pounds. Each crew member pulls two oars.

The dory has a tradition in lifeguarding in Long Beach, having been brought here in 1918 by then captain of lifeguards, Roy J. (Dutch) Miller. The original dories, built in Cape Cod, were wood.

They were the principal rescue boat in Long Beach for about six years. In 1924, the city purchased the first power boat for lifeguard work. There still are some dories in the Long Beach Lifeguard Service, and they now are used at Alamitos Bay.

The National Dorymen's Association, which sponsors the annual competition, was founded in 1956, and consists of about 100 members, who are lifeguards up and down the California coast.

CSLB Indian students living 'hand to mouth' in aid lag

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

American Indian students held a three-day sale of home-cooked fry-bread this week at California State College, Long Beach, to try to keep eight Indian students in school.

"The eight students have been 'literally living hand to mouth in one apartment' because financial grants from the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs, due five weeks ago, have yet to come in, according to a spokeswoman for the college's Educational Opportunities Program.

According to Karen Wells, an American Indian and associate director of EOP, checks for most of the 87 Indian students at CSLB were late.

Registration fees were deferred, but the college's financial aids office refused to grant living expenses to the students, who began attending classes Sept. 13, she said.

MRS. WELLS has charged the financial aids office refused cost-of-living grants to low-income Indian students on order from State College Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke and because "this school doesn't give a damn whether Indian students come to this campus or not."

According to Sylvia Diegnau, who became the college's financial aids officer last August, problems that eventually delayed the checks began last spring when her predecessor, Donald Tisdale, was asked by Pres. Stephen Horn to resign.

The financial aid office operated for four months without a director, said Miss Diegnau, and during that time statewide hiring freezes cut their manpower down an additional three positions.

Compounding the problems, she said, was the resignation last August of the clerk who handled Indian students grant applications since Tisdale's forced resignation.

Miss Diegnau added that many of the Indian students' applications for grants from the Bureau of Indian Affairs also were submitted after standard deadlines, and "we don't have much in the way of contingency funds."

MRS. WELLS said one of the eight students still awaiting grants, Leland Chavez, a Paiute Indian, planned this week to "say to hell with it, leave the place," and 10 other Indian students have transferred to other colleges since the semester's start where the promise of funding was greater.

Mrs. Wells said she does not expect the remaining eight grants to reach Cal State until the end of October.

Drug sale trial

Search warrant faulty, doctor's lawyers argue

By VINT MADER
Staff Writer

Defense attorneys Friday attacked the validity of search warrants under which masses of records were seized at the office of North Long Beach physician Charles Edward Baker, 59, the day he was arrested there on 11 drug charges.

Albert C. S. Ramsey and Edward P. George claimed a section of the state Health and Safety Code was misinterpreted by the prosecution in its Sept. 8 application for the warrants.

At a resumption of Dr. Baker's preliminary hearing, Ramsey told Judge John C. Spence Jr. that Deputy District Attorney Dinko J. Bozanich failed to include an important point in his affidavits supporting his request for a warrant.

BOZANICH failed to say, Ramsey declared, that physicians are exempt from the law forbidding the furnishing of dangerous drugs.

Bozanich replied that Dr. Baker's conduct in dispensing drugs over a long period was not in the legitimate role of a physician, that "despite having the title of a doctor, he was operating a supermarket for drugs."

He said Baker should not be granted "some exalted position versus the guy who sells on the streets" and claimed that the legal phrasing exempting physicians under the code was clearly conveyed to Judge Elsworth M. Beam, issuer of the warrants.

The prosecutor said Ramsey failed to check the point with Judge Beam, and offered to testify with Charles A. Stowell, investigator for the State Board of Medical Examiners, that they did not fail to specify the exemption.

FRIDAY'S session included cross-examination by Ramsey of Dr. Forrest J. Grunigen on testimony he gave at the hearing's first session Oct. 7 as an expert witness for the prosecution.

Still pending is cross-examination of Dr. Edward R. Bloomquist on similar testimony he also gave that day.

Judge Spence set a prospective final session of the hearing for 2 p.m. Tuesday, the earliest time

Bloomquist will be available for return.

Also thrown into Friday's session was a mysterious occurrence Oct. 8 when 11 of Dr. Baker's prescriptions entered as prosecution exhibits disappeared from the courtroom at the end of that day's proceedings.

Judge Spence recovered two scraps of the evidence in a men's public washroom.

Earlier he took evidence from his clerk, James I.

Jonaitis, that the prescriptions were missing from the top of the clerk's desk moments after Dr. Baker had been standing nearby.

SPENCE ordered that the Oct. 8 inquiry be made a part of the hearing record.

At the time, he also directed that the doctor and his wife, Margaret, undergo personal searches.

Dr. Baker's attorneys stipulated to use as substitute evidence photocopies the prosecution had made of the prescriptions.

However, Bozanich told the judge he will have to investigate whether all can be replaced by that means.

He said there may be "one slight problem" in that "we don't have them all photocopied."

He promised to comb over his material closely "so that I could never mislead anyone" and reserved a definite report on their availability until Tuesday's session.

Central Area vice raid cases in court

The cases of seven women and a man arrested in a mid-September police crackdown on vice in the Central District of Long Beach came up in Municipal Courts Friday.

Two of the women, Bettie Kay Lynch, and Dolores Elizabeth Stowe, entered pleas of nolo contendere to charges of solicitation for prostitution and were fined and placed on probation.

Trial was begun for another Mrs. Vera Evangeline Robinson, on a similar charge. It will resume Monday.

The cases of three others and the man were continued.

Judge Elsworth L. Beam is presiding over the jury trial of Miss Robinson, a 21-year-old go-go dancer, of San Diego who is represented by Deputy Public Defender Robert P. Schmitz.

Judge Beam recessed the trial after Deputy City Prosecutor Charles Ramsbarger Jr. completed his side of the case.

Miss Lynch, 23, a waitress, of 2530 McFadden St., Santa Ana, and Miss Stowe, a Los Angeles insurance clerk, entered their pleas to the same charge before Commissioner John E. Carroll.

Carroll suspended proceedings against them, placed them on a year's probation and fined them $65 each.

Manuel Wilkins, 31, of 3628 Caspian Ave., who is charged with offering to procure a woman for an undercover officer, appeared before Judge J. Merrill Lilley, who granted his request for a continuance to Nov. 10.

Judge Lilley, presiding in the criminal master calendar court, continued the case against Annette Tillmon, 32, of 715 E. 11th St., to the same date, and set court appearances for Connie Brown, 24, of 1314 Orange Ave., and Linda Davis, 22, of 1430 Linden Ave., for Nov. 22.

Lilley revoked the $625 bond of Carol Lynn Sauler, 25, a Los Angeles housewife, when she did not appear in response to his bailiff's calls for her.

SP faces $2-million suit in youth's injury

By ARLINE SHERER
Staff Writer

Los Angeles attorney Irving Green said Friday he has filed a $2-million damage suit against Southern Pacific Railroad on behalf of a 9-year-old Paramount boy who lost his legs in a freight train accident Aug. 30.

The suit on behalf of Roger Hughes Jr., 15315 Castana Ave., was filed in Norwalk Superior Court. While the Hughes case is being handled in the courts, there is a push on in the California legislature to outlaw similar damage suits against railroad companies.

The youngster lost the lower portion of his legs when he tried to grab onto a moving tank car and fell under the wheels at the Southern Pacific tracks near his home. Now a patient at Bellflower Community Hospital, Hughes is in "satisfactory" condition.

THE BOY'S attorney alleges in the complaint that the railroad company was negligent.

"The railroad had been advised that children were playing in the area, and it failed to exercise reasonable care in guarding against an accident. The area should have been patrolled or fenced and the debris which attracts the children removed," he said.

Green is optimistic about the suit, saying he has just won a $500,000 judgment in a similar damage case against the Santa Fe railroad.

A spokesman for Southern Pacific said railroad officers in company headquarters in San Francisco had not been served with the papers. He reserved comment on the case.

Since the accident, Paramount residents and interested people have contributed funds to aid in Roger's recovery. Plans are being worked out for a trust fund.

IN THE CALIFORNIA Legislature, a bill has been introduced by state senator Gordon Cologne, R-Riverside, that bars any person who tries to jump aboard a moving train without permission of railroad authorities from recovering damages for his injuries, with two exceptions. The railroad may be held liable if the injuries were intentionally caused or if the injuries resulted from a dangerous condition which the railroad knew about and willfully disregarded.

The bill passed the Senate by vote of 26 to 0 and is on the floor of the Assembly. If the Assembly approves it, it will go back to the Senate for concurrence on amendments and then to the governor for signing. The bill, if it becomes law, will not affect cases being filed in the courts now.

Cancer (June 21-July 21): Give your... a break this Sunday in all departments of daily living. Reflection will show you, eventually, a sudden change of viewpoint.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 22): Faith and trust may move literal mountains. Assume the best be deflected at whatever constructive measures come to view.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make your appearance bright and early, prepared to carry your sun share of the community's traditional observances.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Competing with your neighbors seldom succeeds. Follow a completely different direction where no comparisons can be made.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Variously (and comments on it) comes to your daily living, most of it enjoyable.

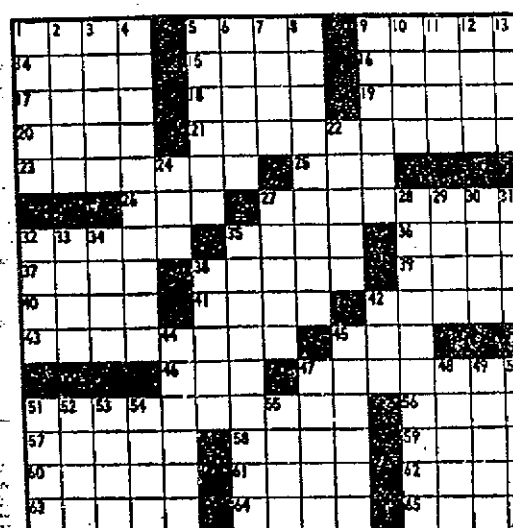

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sharing pastimes with friends and family turns out to be a complex and fascinating exploit. No two want to do the sun's thing all the same time.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Recent revisions add some tension to personal habits. You may need to offer quite clear explanations.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Mixed in with the pleasures of the day is enough work to bring normal fatigue.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Where your mood's change there's fuel for happiness as more is won about tangled arrangements.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Camellias are beginning to catch up to the roses and soon will be taking over the spotlight by blooming throughout the fall, winter and into spring, when the roses will again take over.

Camellias are tough, woody shrubs that tolerate up to several hours of sun, yet they grow just as unhappily as the lesser woody shrubs when they are planted too deep in the ground.

We saw camellias that were planted too deep along the wall of a department store near the sidewalk. The foliage was scarce, no leaves at the end of the branches and the current season growth, which should have been at least four inches, was only one-eighth of an inch!

The store manager gave me permission to dig around several of the sickly plants. Each one was two inches or more too deep. This means the top of the root ball was that far below the ground level.

Additionally, the soil medium was too loose because I could push the trowel down to the hilt. Those plants eventually will die because the moist soil around the trunks will break down the bark tissue through the cambium layer where the life-giving sap travels. They'll die when the sap flow stops. What a cruel waste of money — the cost of the plants, of the amendments to prepare for planting and the labor.

THOSE plants should be carefully dug up, the root balls soaked in water and drained when the bubbling has stopped. The prepared soil should be dug out, the holes filled with water and when water has disappeared into the ground, the plants replanted.

They should be in firm soil with the top of the root balls level with the surrounding ground. A ridge of soil at the edge of the plant holes will act as a dam and confine the water within the root ball areas. The plants will then get the thirst-quenching drinks when needed.

Check up on the early season blooming camellias. Select several for the garden, but don't get all early season bloomers. There some that flower mid-season, the others that are late flowering.

CAMELLIAS... don't plant too deep

Three different periods of mature blooming camellias provide color from mid-October through about mid-April. As the early variety reach their peak of bloom, the mid-season ones begin to flower. The late bloomers start as the mid-season ones pass their bloom peak.

We mentioned roses for color throughout the summer into fall...

They will still blossom if fertilized. The bare root planting season begins later part of December. By all means look up the 1972 All America Selections "champion roses". They are Apollo, a hybrid tea rose with lovely soft surprise yellow with touches of crimson... and Portrail a beautiful hybrid tea with several tones of pink.

SPACE limited me in last week's column to finish up on proteas. In the protea family, Mr. Eshelman had named several varieties of the genus leucodendrons. L. discolor to 24 degrees and are a most decorative species. Flowers to seven feet, the branches are slender and upright. The female plant has yellow cones tinged with red and yellow. The male leaves turn golden yellow tinged with red.

L. grandiflorum to 24 degrees (Rose Cocade) is a mid-winter to spring bloomer. Blossoms are pale green to cream yellow flushed with a deep rose center. Growth to about four feet and are also excellent as a foliage plant.

L. argenteum (Silver tree) to 29 degrees, is a beautiful foliage tree to 25 feet. The flowers are insignificant. Branches are excellent for foliage arrangements. Tree is limited by frost sensitivity.

The proteas and the other groups of the protea family plants are available at few selected nurseries from Goleta and Santa Barbara down into San Diego.

Remember — these plants love sun, must have good drainage, be fed with acid food, need periodic watering and not kept constantly moist!

Job time

Erica blanda is an early flowering heather that blooms for four or five months. Unlike the Mediterranean heather, blanda branches grow out loosely. Heather must be planted in a half and half soil mixture and pre-moistened peat moss, because of the root ball forms a tight mass of fine hair-like roots.

Feed the white callas a fertilizer containing phosphoric acid and potash. Such feeding also teases the dwarf white callas to bloom.

Plant yellow callas where they'll get at least a half a day of sun. The sun teases the plants to bloom. If you grow them in full shade, plants have lush leafage but no blooms.

Set out shrubs and trees before the winter rains set in. The roots will get established and the natural rains will benefit the plants.

Briefly...

'Render unto Caesar' view; Baptist candor on actions

By LES RODNEY

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, but unto God the things that are God's."

"Obey God, not man." Is there a contradiction between these two biblical injunctions? Should the church, and the churchman, ever oppose the actions of the state? Never?

Who is right, those who say the Christian church has no proper business passing moral judgments on secular government actions, or those like the Berrigans who say true Christianity may mean defying one's own authorities?

Or are they both off line?

Here, anyhow, is an interesting viewpoint on this always controversial question by Rev. Dr. H. David Burcham, veteran pastor for Covenant Presbyterian Church, captain in the Navy Chaplain Corps, and twice president of the local Council of Churches. Says Dr. Burcham:

Our Lord lived in the era of the Caesars. Perhaps his most quoted phrase alluding to the Roman monarch was: "Render unto Caesar, the things that are Caesar's, but unto God the things that are God's." This is a tremendously important guideline for every generation. People find themselves, so often, pulled between what they regard as conflicting loyalties of state and of faith.

There are always the extremists on one side or the other. Those on one side would seem to rule out the reasonable claims of the state, insisting that they live only by personal conscience, given them through their religious faith. This sounds noble, but too often, even while they say this, they do so protected by the freedoms guaranteed them by the very state that they do not want to recognize, and living at a level of comfort or even luxury that is made possible only because of the standards and protections of the state. It hardly seems either fair or reasonable, then, for them to insist that the state has no claim on them, in return.

There are other extremists on the opposite side: the supernaturalists. Every country has them. These are they who, on the surface, would appear very religious, up to a point. They often tend to identify religion and their own concept of nationalism. But when a crisis comes, when a clear conflict of authority arises between state and individual conscience, they not only are for the state themselves, but too often intimidate and even persecute those who try to maintain a faithfulness to their conscience when they feel they can do no other.

It seems to me that Jesus' words make either extreme position inadequate. For Jesus recognized the just claims of secular society and its governments (Caesar); and he also recognized the just claims of God. There is no question but what he placed the claims of God first. But he did not give license to ignore or downplay the proper and reasonable claims of the state. It would seem to me that in every generation — certainly including this one — a great deal of tension and distress is caused by a failure to come to terms with the broad and demanding implications of our Lord's wise words: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, but unto God the things that are God's."

DR. HAROLD KEY, whose article here on the work of the Wycliffe Bible Translators was well received by readers, is available to speak to church groups on the subject, which he knows from 20 years personal experience. Dr. Key can be reached at Cal State Long Beach, where he is associate professor of anthropology.

AND SPEAKING of the church passing moral judgment on the state, as we were in the first item, the American Baptist Convention sends along from its Valley Forge headquarters a booklet with the resolutions adopted during its national get-together in Minneapolis. They touch on such wide-ranging topics as criminal justice, fragmented society, Indian Americans, peace, the Middle East, and Indochina.

The booklet then does a most interesting thing. It poses the question "Why Does the American Baptist Convention pass resolutions?" and replies that the resolutions are in fulfillment of one of the Convention's basic objectives as listed in the original act of incorporation, namely "to give expression to the opinions of its constituency upon moral, religious, and denominational matters."

They are, it adds, "an attempt to express a Christian view on crucial issues," but "Resolutions passed by the ABC cannot be said to represent the conclusions of all American Baptists or even all American Baptists attending the Convention; they do represent the careful thinking of a large number of people."

A printed copy of the resolutions, it goes on, is shared with all Congressmen, Senators and other pertinent officials.

After describing exactly how the 1971 resolutions were prepared, the booklet in a section titled "How can these resolutions be used in your church?" makes the following statement:

"The resolutions come to your church for your consideration. They are not standards by which loyalty to the American Baptist Convention can be measured. The church which rejects them can still be as loyal as the church which agrees with all of them. It is hoped they will stimulate your church's best thinking and will be a challenge to seriously considering your Christian responsibility..."

It then tells how any church member can submit his or her own suggestion for resolutions to be considered in 1972.

Regardless of how one stands on the whole question of denominational resolutions, the ABC would seem to rate a little salute for explaining "why,"

"how" and "so what" instead of just loftily handing down the word.

ONE OF THE failings of weekly journalism, such as a Saturday religion section, is that it may announce something interestingly different is going to take place, and then never get around to telling the reader how it came out.

We CAN report that the rummage sale last week for the benefit of the Hoffman Halfway House for women, a safe uniquely co-sponsored by the woman's organization of First Congregational Church and Temple Israel, was a success, with more than $800 realized. Leftover materials were allotted right here where they would do the most specific good, to the Neighborhood Center, for some needy Westside kids, PTA and Salvation Army.

JOHN C. HALLETT, minister of music at First Baptist of Lakewood, who has composed more than 500 sacred cantatas, anthems and solos, has received a cherished award from the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers for the year 1971-72 in tribute to the public performance of his music (which has also been heard on radio and television).

Congratulations to brother Hallett, who adds another dimension to this area's enviable reputation for top-notch religious music—a reputation which extends through various Protestant denominations, Catholic churches and the synagogues.

(For geographical buffs, Hallett lives in Seal Beach and First Baptist of Lakewood is actually located in Long Beach. But Lakewood High has one heckuva football team, I do hear.

Rev. Billy J. Devine has accepted the pastorate of First Baptist Church in Cypress, 9131 Watson St. Until recently, he pastored Trinity Baptist Church in Santa Clara.

Rev. Devine worked in rescue missions and pastored churches in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri and Illinois before coming to California. He received his AB Degree from William Jewell College in Liberty, Mo. and his Master of Divinity Degree from Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth, Texas. He and his wife Kathryn have five children.

Report on backing revolutionaries called 'slanted'

Readers Digest article on World Council hit by Lutheran leaders

Leaders of the two U.S. Lutheran church bodies that hold membership in the World Council of Churches have taken sharp issue with an article in the October Reader's Digest which accuses the WCC of underwriting Communist-backed revolutionary terrorists.

Responding to the article, entitled "Must Our Churches Finance Revolution?" were Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the Lutheran Church in America, and Rev. Dr. Kent S. Knutson, president of the American Lutheran Church.

A heading over the article, written by Clarence W. Hall, a former editor of the Christian Herald, charges that the World Council "is using church power and church funds to back insurrection in the United States and Africa," and asks, "Is this what Christ taught?" Nowhere in the article, however, say the Lutheran leaders, is that charge supported.

Dr. Marshall, a member of the WCC's Executive and Central Committees, flatly denied that the member churches of the ecumenical organization are financing revolution through its Program to Combat Racism.

"That program is financing educational and welfare projects for persons living under the control of revolutionaries," he said. "If the churches did not assist such persons, then the churches would be guilty of political motivations because they would restrict their work to persons under some governments and neglect the persons under other jurisdictions."

Dr. Knutson asserted that "there seems to be a concerted effort in the public press to discredit the World Council of Churches," and cited the article in the Digest as "a case in point."

"Much of this information is slanted and unperceptive of Christian work," he said. "Some of it is motivated by political considerations, even planted in the American press by those with no interest in or real knowledge of Christianity, in order to lessen the influence of the Christian faith. Some of it is simply misinformation and some of it honest disagreement as to the function and responsibility of the church."

While the LCA has not contributed to the WCC's special program to combat racism, Dr. Marshall said he had voted for the grants, consisting of $200,000 in the fall of 1970 and another $200,000 last September.

Amounts ranging from $5,000 to $20,000 were given to 19 organizations in southern Africa and elsewhere, "in every case," it was noted, "for humanitarian purposes," such as education, general welfare, legal defense, medical care, and the like.

Guidelines laid down for the program, according to Dr. Marshall, "forbid identifying fully with any non-church organization or of initiating a judgment for or against the use of military power."

"Rather," he said, "the grants must foster self-determination of peoples, relief of the oppressed and support for health, welfare and educational activities. Out of a much larger number of requests, the specific grants were authorized because they promised the best fulfillment of the purposes of the program."

Dr. Knutson said the ALC has "given no special money" to the WCC's program, but through Lutheran World Relief, Lutheran World Action and the general work of the Lutheran World Federation has "helped hundreds of thousands of people in poverty, in oppression and in the same kinds of situations as those helped by this program to combat racism."

"We have done so, scrupulously avoiding irresponsible political involvement," he added.

Stressing that the World Council "is neither communist, ultra-liberal (whatever that means), atheistic, or irresponsible," Dr. Knutson declared that "those who say these things either do so out of plain misinformation or deliberately to attack the church in order to hurt it."

The World Council "is really one of the more conservative expressions of Christian concern," he said.

The Reader's Digest will have a second article on the World Council in its November issue, focusing on what the magazine described as "a look at the effect and influence of the Soviet-controlled churches on the World Council's ecumenical movement."

Hardest part of being a Christian

LONDON — A survey among Roman Catholic students at the University of London showed that most thought the hardest thing about being a Christian was "practicing what you preach."

Ask Attica probe

The council of national agency heads of the two-million member United Church of Christ condemned New York State officials for using armed force to regain control of the Attica prison. They called upon Christians throughout the state "to join in demanding a searching and thorough legislative investigation of the Attica tragedy."

COUNCIL OF 12 LEADER HERE

Elder Gordon B. Hinkley, member of the Council of Twelve of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints since 1961, and co-ordinator of the world-wide missionary program, will speak this weekend at a conference of the Long Beach East Stake to consider family life problems. Public is invited Sunday 10 a.m. in Millikan High School auditorium.

Confident living
She canceled
fear with faith

By NORMAN VINCENT
PEALE

What are you afraid of? Forget it! And to do that we suggest canceling out fear with faith. There is nothing more powerful than faith in depth, faith that is the real thing. The most amazing things can happen as a result of it. Faith is the only sure cure for fear.

The TV star, Virginia Graham, talks of the faith philosophy. As a child she feared the darkness. But her father would say, "God will take care of you. There is nothing to be afraid of."

The strength of her father's faith took hold of Virginia Graham's mind and her faith proved strong enough to handle some pretty tough blows. At 19 she was in a serious automobile accident and was told that because of it she would probably never be able to have children. But she believed otherwise and her marriage was blessed by a daughter.

VIRGINIA was thrilled with this wonderful miracle of life and was active and busy as a mother and in her radio work. But as the years passed she would get sudden temperatures and infections for no apparent reason and the doctors kept taking tests. They found nothing except for one test which revealed she was expecting another baby.

Three months later, Virginia felt a terrible pain and was rushed to the hospital. When morning came, a gray, overcast morning, she could tell from the doctor's expression the news wasn't good.

"You lost the baby," said the doctor, "and there are further complications."

Her husband entered at that time looking very troubled. "I want you to go to sleep, dear," he said, and suddenly he turned and quickly left the room.

"Why is he acting so strange?" she asked the doctor.

"Well, we're going to have to do a little surgery."

"What do you mean," she said. "Do I have cancer?"

The doctor could not erase the answer from his face. "I'm not going to die!" cried Virginia. "I'm only 36 years old and I have a child and a husband to take care of. I'm too young to die!"

They quieted her and began the tests, one after another. Then next day, depressed and afraid, Virginia cried out into the empty room, "I have tried to love where it was needed. God, why have You failed me? How could You betray me like this? You do not love me."

Despondent and empty inside, she picked up the phone and called her husband. "I am not going to put you and Lynn through this suffering. Thank you for all the wonderful years we've had. I want you to know that what I am going to do is best."

HER HEAD whirling and the fear of dying from cancer assailing her, Virginia walked to the window ten stories above the street. She pulled it up and started to swing herself

GOINGS ON

John Kachelmayer, a former priest who has been termed successful in bringing the Christian message to many young people in the hippie culture, will speak tonight at 7 as part of the missionary program of Parkcrest Church of Christ, 5950 E. Parkcrest St., along with Chikhi Okamoto, a student from Japan now at Pacific Christian College. The Inglewood Christian Church Bell Ringers will feature the music. On Sunday, Ron Butler, back from the Congo, will preach at the 9 and 10:15 a.m. services. . . . A service of song and skits by the Luther Leaguers will replace the regular service Sunday, 10 a.m. at University Lutheran, 1429 Clark Ave. in connection with Stewardship Sunday. . . . Next Saturday, Oct. 23, Gospel Concerts will present a program in Municipal Auditorium featuring Bill Gaither and his group. He is author of "He Touched Me," popular theme song for Kathryn Kuhlman.

REV. JOHN J. HINKLE, minister of Christ Church Unity of Los Angeles, will speak on "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit" at the Long Beach chapter of Camp Farthest Out, a week-end retreat program, meeting tonight, 7 p.m. in North Long Beach United Methodist, 5600 Linden Avenue. . . . The Long Beach Unity Society of Practical Christianity will celebrate its 48th birthday Sunday, 4 p.m. with a concert by the Los Alamitos Pine Junior High Honor Choir, a select group who have done well at competitive music festivals, directed by Ron Morse, formerly of Cal State Long Beach. All welcome at Unity Chapel, 935 E. Broadway, and refreshments served. . . . Dr. Norman Campbell will show a collection of mounted moths and butterflies from all over the world Sunday, 7 p.m. at the Outrigger Single Adult Club meeting, Covenant Presbyterian, Third and Atlantic. . . . Mrs. Francis Konopacki will speak on "You, and the Four Devarajahs" Sunday 3 p.m. at the Theosophical Society, 602 Pacific Avenue. . . . A "Faith on the Green" is being held today at the area's oldest Episcopal church, St. Johns, at 1537 Neptune Ave., with pews brought around the horn a century ago and many other historic features.

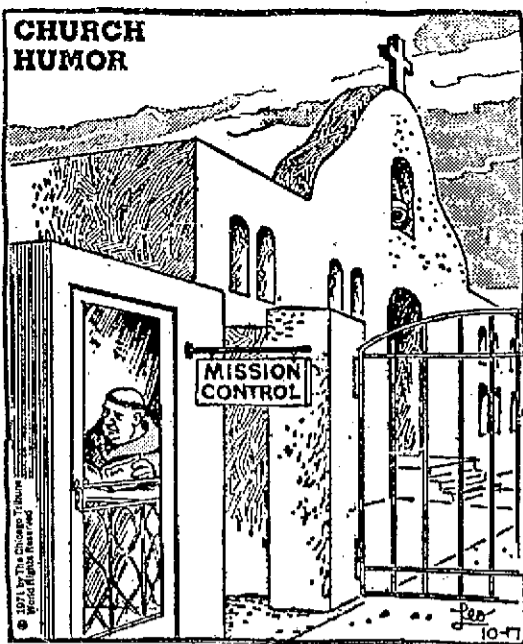

out the window sill. But then she said that all of a sudden she "felt" a hand on her shoulder with a firm grip. She knew it was the hand of her father who had been gone for some years, but his presence seemed very real at that moment. She remembered how he spoke to her as a small child. Again his voice came strong and full of faith. "Don't let anger and fear talk. Listen to the voice of God. God will take care of you."

Virginia looked up at the sunlit sky. Her face was wet with tears. She knew that she could not take her own life. Only the Giver of life could be the Taker. She decided to accept His will and a profound relief swept over her. Something had come to her — an in-depth faith. She put it against her fears. And now, years later, she still witnesses for the power of faith over fear. Virginia Graham believes in the words, "For in Him we live and move, and have our being." So why are you afraid? Forget it!

'GOLDEN VOICE' IN ANAHEIM

Ed Lyman, who sang the lead role in Jerome Hines' opera "I Am the Way," and has been called "The golden voice of sacred song" in reviews of his many albums, will sing at the 8:30 and 10:50 a.m. services and at the big noon barbecue celebrating the 15th anniversary of Central Baptist Church of Orange County, in Anaheim.

Another minister's view
on public school prayer

Rev. David L. Hocking of First Brethren Church adds his view to the I.P.T.'s sampling of area ministers on the restoration of public school prayer through a constitutional amendment.

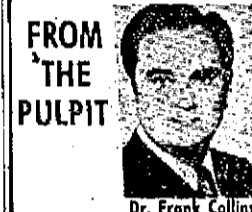

The issue is difficult in terms of separation of church and state. While on paper it may seem logical to eliminate any religious efforts from our public schools in order to maintain this "separation," yet the tragic truth is that the result of these attempts has cultivated a viewpoint that often is anti-God, and leaves God completely out of a world He created and which according to the Bible He is sustaining by His own power.

The First Amendment seems to guarantee the freedom for any student or faculty member to "pray" or whatever, so long as it does not demand or require another to participate against his will. If a teacher offered prayer in class, a student has the privilege of agreeing or not, but to argue that this is discrimination against him would bring into question anything that is taught or said with which the student does not agree. If a student wishes to pray for ("give thanks") his lunch, what kind of logic would declare that act to be offensive to another student of different religious persuasion?

It seems that a lot of people are "uptight" about an issue that indicates a weakness in what they believe, rather than a "holy concern" for the separation of church and state which in itself is a most difficult issue for the best of thinkers to understand.

If prayer back in the schools will stop the tide of anti-God, secularistic education in our public schools, then I say, "Amen!"

FROM THE PULPIT

There are different ways of obtaining knowledge, but you will never be an educated person until you have applied yourself to ONE of the ways. You may educate yourself. It is difficult and most people who pursue this course fail, but it CAN be done.

You may go to public school. Most people are educated in this manner. But if you drop out here, you will not receive an education. It will require from 12 to 20 years, depending on how MUCH education you want and how much you are willing to discipline yourself and sacrifice for it.

You may attend private school. It costs more, but the study and discipline requirements are the same. If you want an education though, you will have to secure it in one of these ways.

There are different ways of learning about yourself, life, death and eternity. There are Home Bible Study Courses, radio programs, and television and correspondence courses. But most people CANNOT understand these without a teacher and soon become drop-outs.

There are the BIBLE TEACHING CHURCHES. Here trained teachers can help you to learn life's greatest lessons. It is a LIFE TIME course and no one ever graduates, for there is always more and more to learn about God, life, death and eternity. But life's greatest subject is always GOD!

Are you in church on a regular, disciplined basis? Do you desire to know something about why you are here, what you are to do, where you are going when you die, something about eternity, and how to get in touch with God?

Learn the Bible and have fellowship with other Christians at the same time! Come to Calvary! Calvary is for you!

COME TO CALVARY! CALVARY IS FOR YOU!

REV. V. F. HALBIG

UCC formally opposes school
prayer measure

WICHITA — Support for the Supreme Court decisions banning "prescribed" prayer and Bible reading in the public schools was voted here this week by the executive council of the two-million-member United Church of Christ. The 42-member council unanimously opposed passage of House Joint Resolution 191 which would amend the Constitution to permit "non-denominational prayer" in public schools.

Basing its action on the need for society for "scrupulous fairness" to people of all convictions and "full religious liberty," the United Church Council said it "strongly supports efforts of schools to increase and improve the teaching of moral values and the appreciation of the role of religion in the development of man's heritage."

Welcome new pastor at NLB Christian

Rev. Virgil F. Halbig, a prominent Christian Church pastor and evangelist, will preach his first sermon Sunday, 10:45 a.m., as interim pastor at North Long Beach Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), 1115 E. Market St.

Halbig, who was pastor of First Christian Church of Selma, Ala., for five years, during which it started up a successful second church, has been state evangelist for the Christian Churches of the state of Washington, and a noted builder, adding 1046 members to a church in Spokane, and 500 in Pocatello, Idaho.

He retired from the active pastorate in 1969 after building a new First Christian Church in Fontana, and has been devoting full time to evangelistic and other specialized ministries.

'Basin smog plans inadequate,' state, U.S. officials say

By GILBERT BAILEY
Contributing Editor

State and federal officials told Los Angeles Basin air pollution officials and county supervisors Friday their plans did not meet state and federal clean air requirements.

Even so, the South Coastal Basin Coordinating Council, made up of supervisors from the six Southern California Counties

He also complained about inadequate air quality data in the plan, but under questioning following the meeting added that his complaints about the plan were "substantive."

"The weakest point in the plan is the lack of specifics in control strategy," Stumph had said earlier.

He noted there was also a lack of "meaningful discussion of transportation controls needed to make up the deficiencies" in air quality.

If THE STATE and federal officials were unhappy with the basin plan, so were the basin officials with the state and federal people.

"You are naive if you think the federal government has an air pollution control program," commented Walter J. Hamming of the Los Angeles Air Pollution Control District.

The council did adopt a land use and lead in gasoline section in the report.

It discusses such air pollution control alternatives as mass transit, car pooling, gasoline and electrical energy rationing, staggering work hours, and shorter work weeks.

HOWEVER, the council dropped a brief paragraph of conclusion to this section of the report which said counties do not have the authority to augment such measures and thus the state should study them.

Banned 'donuts' cost Navy $30,000

The Long Beach Naval Shipyard has just completed at a cost of $30,000 two huge metal "donuts," used to transfer oil and wastes through the harbor, although Naval regulations now forbid their construction.

The donuts have long been the subject of complaints from the State Department of Fish and Game because of their contribution to oil pollution within the harbor. They are used to transport oily wastes across the harbor.

"All construction of new donuts has been stopped," a Navy spokesman said.

However, the two latest donuts need only a paint job before they will be put into use — and they will be used.

The Navy regulation forbidding construction on new donuts was written last spring, but the shipyard received the regulation only recently, according to the Navy spokesman. As a result the two latest donuts, numbers 16 and 17, were built during the summer months.

The shipyard's lack of knowledge about the regulation was not unique. Joseph A. Grimes Jr., deputy undersecretary of the Navy in charge of pollution control, said on Sept. 23 that the Navy was still building donuts.

"I would hope they will be phased out," he added under questioning at a Los Angeles news conference.

However, the Navy's May 17, 1971, "Guidelines and Standards for Prevention, Control and Abatement of Air and Water Pollution," state:

"The construction and/or procurement of gravity differential oil waste devices (donuts) shall be limited to some form of closed-bottom, controllable effluent types, and the further construction of conventionally designed 'donuts' is not authorized."

The two just constructed by the shipyard are open ended.

SEEKING SOME REVENGE

Chargerette seeks small bit of revenge in today's Oak Leaf Stakes, $75,000 feature of Oak Tree-at-Santa Anita meeting. Chargerette was fouled by Impressive Style in Anokaia Stakes which Miss Lady Bug won. Both horses join Chargerette in Oak Leaf lineup.

TAB MISS LADY BUG IN OAK LEAF STAKES

Eight standout 2-year-old fillies will determine the West's juvenile distaff champion today in the third running of the $75,000-added Oak Leaf Stakes at 1 & 1/16 miles.

If all eight start the gross purse for the event will be $101,825, with the winner earning $61,095 for the Oak Tree-at-Santa Anita race.

with Howard Grant, Goldan with Danny Velasquez, Timely Gap with Jerry Lambert and Revlynne with Fernando Toro.

Miss Lady Bug is listed as the 8-to-5 favorite.

Headlining the field are the three fillies who battled it out last week in the seven-furlong Anokaia Stakes. In that one the winner was Miss Lady Bug, with Impressive Style second and Chargerette third. The latter, however, was bothered in the stretch drive and the stewards disqualified Impressive Style and placed her third behind Chargerette.

Chargerette is second at 5-to-2 with Impressive Style third choice at 3-to-1. Fourth in the field of nine 2-year-old fillies in the 1 & 1/16 mile test is Lady Graustark at 6-to-1.

Swift Market again held on stubbornly in the stretch to nose out longshot Elite Khaled in the featured $10,000 Antiago Purse for older fillies and mares Friday before 15,142 fans.

Market Again, who was piloted by John Sellers, held a short lead from the start of the 6-1/2 furlong sprint on the grass and displayed admirable courage in winning narrowly. Elite Khaled, a 20-1 outsider ridden by Fernando Alvarez, was a head in front of third-place Constant Commotion, with favored Vallombrosa only another half-length away in fourth.

Chargerette was not an original nominee for the Oak Leaf last May and has been supplemented on payment of $5,000. Her new jockey is Donald Pierce. Bill Shoemaker pilots Miss Lady Bug and Impressive Style's rider is Bill Mahorney.

Market Again raced the distance in 1:14 1/5 and returned $18, $9.80 and $7 in registering her fourth victory in seven career outings. Elite Khaled paid $14.80 and $9 and Constant Commotion returned $6.80.

Others in the field are Sporting Lass with Fernando Alvarez, Windsor Clare with L.J. Durosseau, Lady Graustark

Dick Cavett Show faltering

By GEORGE ERES
TV-Radio Editor

You may have noticed the array of big name stars who have been showing up for 90-minute solo appearances on the Dick Cavett Show at 11:30 p.m., Ch. 7 — Anthony Quinn, Fred Astaire, Peter Ustinov.

The all-star one-week splurge takes on some meaning when you learn that the Dick Cavett show is in trouble.

Cavett's contract with ABC expired Friday and the network gave him a one-week extension while terms are being talked over.

The trade publication "Variety" reported a rumor Cavett might move over to CBS.

ELIZABETH BAUER made her debut as a member of the "Ironside" series crew in the Oct. 5 show and we have a report about what happened that night, which we pass along to you. Here's the setting:

Elizabeth lives with her parents and the three sat in front of the TV set watching. Jack Bauer, her father, watched professionally (he's a casting director at 20th Century-Fox).

When his daughter, in the scene in which she wept to Chief Ironside (Raymond Burr) about her father "lying in the gutter with a bullet in him," he choked up, wiped away a furtive tear and, according to Elizabeth, seemed to be embarrassed.

"People began calling during commercial breaks," she said. "The show was over at 8:30 and our phone never stopped ringing until midnight."

Her favorite call came from Douglas Benton, producer of the show. "Doug said I was a smash with the PTA circuit. He said that's the most important rating."

WHILE I'm making public relations people happy, I might as well do something for Betty Grable's.

Miss Grable said "all that talk about my legs was just press agent stuff. I thought that bit about the legs was all over but today I can go into novelty shops in New York and see these great big pictures of me looking over my shoulder. Posters of me, along with pictures of Marlon Brando on a motorcycle and W. C. Fields playing poker. When will it end?"

Miss Grable made a few confessions:

"I'm sure thousands of women have better legs than I do. In dancing I just get by, and my voice is just a voice. I don't breathe with my diaphragm as singers are supposed to do. I'm really basically lazy, and have been all my life."

Miss Grable, who was the pinup girl of WW II, will show up on Ernie Ford's "The Fabulous Fordies," on Oct. 29.

"I'm not trying to make a big comeback or anything, but dancing is still a lot of fun and the studios feel like home to me. I don't really know how interested people today are in the 1940s, but as long as they want me to work, I love it. These days I get most of my exercise bowling or climbing in and out of a golf cart."

"Read The Meter"

By LARRY MEDER
HARBOR CHEVROLET

As this "proud, prowled, ear-propelled" Viking Man O' War pulled alongside the Jetty and completed docking procedures, Lars Svensen, the first mate, addressed the crew.
He reminded them of the time-worn adage that "Norsemen make the best oarsmen" and went on to congratulate them on having completed the last leg of their voyage across the Briny Deep at an average speed of 17 knots!
For this reason, he went on, he had some good news and some bad news to offer. To a man, through thirst-parched throats, they demanded the good news first.
Lars, standing regally to his full height of 6'3", lustily announced that the late afternoon Jessie of Grog was to be doubled and served immediately! When the 60 Scandinavian Scullers had greedily consumed this great needed nourishment, the first mate then rang a bell for attention.
He bellowed that it was time for the bad news. Lars, somewhat sadly, then imparted to the crew that the shipwright had just completed the Captain's hand-hewn water skis — and the skipper wanted to try them out before sundown!
Folks, it takes a Chevy to run over the "FORDS" — so you better get yours from Meder at HARBOR CHEVROLET, 3770 Cherry, GA 6-3341.

Judge hopes court TV to arouse public

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The 17-year-old girl had been charged with being a runaway, being incorrigible, and shoplifting. As she pleaded with the judge to let her return home, television cameras recorded the hearing for broadcast later.

The departure from the normal court reluctance to disclose details of juvenile cases was authorized by Judge Michael Corrigan of Sedgewick County Juvenile Court as part of his quest for new methods to replace past efforts that he says have had very little deterrent effect.

"If we as juvenile judges, and juvenile courts, are going to have any effect in the future," he reasons, "it's time we direct our attention to methods that might change the attitudes of young people."

Allowing the television cameras and microphones into his courtroom last month was the latest step in a program he began about a year ago to give the news media access, under certain restrictions, to material from his court. His search for new methods also includes a program to build up a corps of 250 volunteer probation counselors.

NAMES OF juveniles are sometimes withheld in reporting cases from the court, but for the televised case the girl's name was used and cameras were allowed to show a front view of her.

Crews from KAKE-TV in Wichita filmed both the pretrial hearing and a later court session to determine disposition of her case. The material was then telecast during a Sunday night news program.

Corrigan granted the girl's request to return home with her mother, with the understanding that both mother and daughter would undergo counseling by a court-appointed psychiatrist.

Corrigan says the regular presence of television cameras in the courtroom might tempt lawyers, the parties involved or judges themselves to "play to the cameras, and this would certainly compromise the judicial process."

But the 34-year-old father of three says favorable reaction to the televising of the girl's case has led him to consider some additional televised coverage, particularly in cases involving drugs, where he believes public awareness is critical.

"THE PUBLIC should be able to know the philosophy of the court and the methods used by the judge," he explains.

"I believe this exposure is a system of checks and balances on the judge and the court... and I believe this is something the people should have. This filming was an educational process—to bring the people into the court and make them a part of the court. Only through this graphic presentation can I arouse the interest of the public."

Corrigan says that without exception the news media have followed the guidelines he set when a working agreement was made on news coverage.

The first condition is that he will not allow filming of any contested proceedings—those likely to draw a considerable public attention. Second, if a case is noncriminal, the name of the juvenile must be withheld. Third, coverage must be in good taste. Fourth, any time the name of a juvenile is used, the judge must clear its use.

"I have never been able to buy the idea that when a juvenile's name is made public, it is a deterrent to crime. I don't think it is," Corrigan says. "I think using the name of the child, when it isn't necessary, can hurt the child very much. However, in serious cases, I think the public has a right to know the name of the juvenile involved."

THE JUDGE says he hopes an additional benefit of increased coverage of Juvenile Court will be a buildup in the force of volunteer probation counselors he seeks.

The counselors are assigned on a one-to-one basis to juveniles who have come before the court. The counselor is expected to spend at least one hour a week with the juvenile assigned to him.

"This can be spent any way the counselor chooses—taking the youth fishing, to a movie, to dinner, or just sitting down and talking," Corrigan says. "The idea is to show that someone cares."

He adds: "I don't think the passage of more laws or stricter laws will have any effect on juvenile delinquency. Only when people get together and roll up their sleeves will it really work."
